DALE CARNEGIE

★ AUTHOR OF "HOW TO STOP WORRYING AND START LIVING" ★

G. M. Wiles, New York City, told me a story the other day about his sister who unwittingly used the most valuable technique in accomplishing her aim. No doubt you, too, have unwittingly used just the right method in persuading someone to do what you want done. Often, intuition or instinct prompts the right method.

Miss Wiles is on the staff of the fine arts department of the University of Chicago. Among her duties is that of staging exhibits. But she doesn't always find exactly what she wants for her exhibits, nor can she always persuade the owner to let her have the art she wants when she does find it.

This was the case this year. She wanted to build her exhibit around three unusual pieces of sculpture. The university owned copies of all three of these pieces but a copy isn't the same thing as an original and it would lend ever so much more importance to the exhibit to display originals.

The sculptor is an elderly man, and no doubt over the course of years had not found it wise to let his originals be on exhibit. Or so it would seem, for he didn't take kindly to the request.

But Miss Wiles has that all-important trait, perseverance. She decided to go to see the artist in person, so she went all the way to Detroit and arriving there made an appointment with the artist. Before the interview, she was shown through the artist's studio and was thrilled by what she saw. Finally came the moment for her "five-minute" interview.

Five minutes? Why, that interview lasted two hours, with the result that the three pieces of sculpture she wanted were loaned to her, and the artist himself appeared on opening day with three of his friends. Maybe that wasn't a triumph for Miss Wiles!

What had she done? She had evidenced genuine interest in the artist's work; she had been a good listener and had encouraged him to talk about his work. That was all. And that was enough! Appreciation works wonders, miracles.

Well Known Carroll County Lady Praises Dr. Burnett's "New Medicine."

MRS. NACY FRAZIER

Mrs. Nacy Frazier, Shorts Creek, Virginia, age 35, states: "I had an operation on the glands in my throat about four years ago. The swelling would not go out of my throat. I also took 18 X-ray treatments and they did not help me."

"I spent about $1,000 with doctors and hospitals and was still no better."

"I was losing weight, nervous, and couldn't sleep at night, and so weak I couldn't hardly get out of bed."

"A friend told me about Dr. Burnett's 'New Medicine,' and I decided to try it. And after taking it five months I have fully recovered. I now do all my housework, feel as well as I ever did in my life."

"The doctors never did tell me what my trouble was, but I thought I had cancer of the throat, but whatever my trouble was I will always give Dr. Burnett's 'New Medicine' the praise for my remarkable recovery after other medicines and remedies had failed."

"I think it is a wonderful medicine."

"I will talk with anyone or will answer any letter anyone wishes to write me."

You may write for more free information.

You may order "New Medicine" now by mail from:

Dr. Burnett's Medicine Company, Hillsville, Va.

"New Medicine" also sold (7) seven days a week at the office of Dr. Chas. K. Burnett, Hillsville, Va.

"New Medicine" recommended as a tonic, but many people have used it for other ailments and they report most satisfactory results.
