Iwo of the Crying Needs of the Tobacco Planters.

"If the farmers would form neighhood clubs, where they could meet once a month and talk over matters. and take liberally of agricultural and other newspapers, and learn what is going on in the world, they would enjoy more of life and greatly improve their material interests," says Major Sutherlin, a wealthy and a wise citizen of Danville, Va. In the above paragraph is compressed a wonderful amount of meaning, and if its import was only half realized by the average planter, there would occur such a radical change in present conditions that the average planter would stand amazed at his own stupidity and stubbornness for lo! these many years.
