WHEN President Harrison appointed Pat Egan, United States Minister to Chili, the better sentiment of the country promptly manifested disapproval. Egan was better known to the public as a jobber, and is reported to have industriously practiced the profession since he has been in Chili. To his partiality for Balmaceda may be attributed the meagre information officially given to the public of the progress of the revolution which has resulted in the overthrow of Balmaceda, and caused lics. him to flee from Chili. Business Excitement.

Almost simultaneous with the re shipments of gold into this country to meet grain and other crop purchases, come the homeward rush of American business men abroad, eager to get back and take advantage of the rise in stocks. This rush is described as unprecedented. A cable telegram to the Herald from London, represents the situation of hundreds of Americans in that city as absolutely tragic. The berths in nearly all the leading lines of steamships have been sold up to October, and premiums of $100, and even as high as $200 are offered the holders of passage tickets. It is said that several of the Western speculators, wild to get "in it," and unable to curb their impatience, are coming
