

GOOD INTEREST ON A DOLLAR

Senator Sawyer's Return to a Brother Who Did Him a Small Favor. Senator Sawyer, of Wisconsin, accumulated an immense fortune in the lumber regions of the northwest. He left New York state comparatively by a poor boy, with $200 in his pocket, which he earned by working on a farm. His brother was then a well-to-do farmer in his native state. As young Sawyer was bidding farewell his brother asked him how much money he had to begin life with in the west.

"I've got $100 in my pocket," said the senator to the farmer. His brother gave him a dollar to make it an even $100. A few years ago Senator Sawyer, returning from a visit to Europe, stopped at his brother's house in New York state to spend a week amid the scenes of his youth. He noticed a cloud on his brother's face. One evening at supper the senator casually inquired into his fortunes, and before the conversation closed developed the fact that he was troubled over some outstanding notes. They were not exactly pressing, but as a thrifty farmer and a conscientious man generally they troubled him. By adroit questioning the senator ascertained the amount of each note and the name of the holder. The next morning at breakfast he said to his brother:

"I want to use your horse and buggy today to take a drive over the country and call on some of my friends. But I go alone."

The horse and buggy were got ready, and away went the eccentric old senator.

They were sitting together that evening after supper, when out of his inside coat pocket the senator drew a small package of papers and handed them to his brother. They were the notes, representing an aggregate of $1,300. He had paid and taken them up. His brother was at first dumfounded. Still he was not averse to the senator's course. The notes had been scattered among three or four men. In the senator's hands they were all together, and then the senator was his brother, and it was only natural that he should prefer him as his creditor.

"Now, you make out a note for the whole amount, and I will secure it," he said. "When I went west," said the senator, looking up at the border of the wall paper, "you gave me a dollar to make up the $200 with which I began life for myself. Probably you have forgotten it, but I never forget a financial transaction. Every dollar I took up today were for only $1.30, and so, instead of being in my debt, I still owe you $150. Here it is." And he handed him the amount in crisp bank notes already counted. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Breezing Match. A Parisian paper relates the following story of a contest in breezing, which, it says, took place between three artists. "My dear," said one of the artists, "yesterday I painted a pine board in imitation of marble, and did it with such fidelity that when the board was put into a pond of water it sank like a stone." "Pooh!" said the second, "that is nothing. Yesterday I happened to hang up my thermometer on the back of the frame of my 'View in the Arctic Regions,' and the mercury instantly went down to 20 degs. below zero."

"All that is nothing at all," said the third artist. "You know my portrait of the old Marquis de Camargue? Well, it is so lifelike that it has to be shaved three times a week."

Phosphates in Food. A deal of rubbish has been written about phosphates in food. What is certain is this, however, that in the finest qualities of flour, from which the best bread is made, there is a slight deficiency in phosphate of calcium. The outer portion of the grain contains more phosphate than the inner part. Somebody has printed that "the quantity of phosphate of calcium contained in living beings is proportional to their activity," but whether this activity is a physical or mental one is not mentioned. It does seem that the phosphates in food do not go to make bone entirely, but are used in other parts of the human economy.—New York Times.

Care of Books. A lover of books will always take good care of them. He never holds the book by the corner of the cover, never turns down leaves, never lays the book down open, either with the face downward or on its back, and never breaks the binding by opening the book too forcibly. He turns the leaves one by one, taking great care not to soil or tear them, and uses the white gently. It makes no difference if the book be cheap or worn, he always handles it gently.—Jewish Messenger.

The Horse Liked Wood. Stranger (anxiously)—I left my horse tied here to your post, and now he's gone. What became of him? Mr. Wayback (reflectively)—I don't know for sure, but from the way that horse o' yours was chawin at my post I shouldn't wonder if he'd eaten it up on an gone off ter hunt another.—Good News.
