Don't feel well

Why?
Oh! I don't know. Worry I expect.
Worrying about what?
Well, you know the servants are a heap of trouble.
The children worry me a heap.
I am broken down.
In the morning I generally have a headache;
Along towards evening my back feels as if it would break.
Every time the baby cries I nearly jump out of my skin, I am so nervous.
Your system needs toning up. Why not take Brown's Iron Bitters the best strengthening medicine made. It will give you a good appetite, make your blood rich and pure, give you strength, make life a pleasure. Not only take it yourself, but give it to the children. It is pleasant to take. Small dose. The only iron medicine that don't blacken the teeth. But get the genuine—it has crossed red lines on wrapper.

SHAME, OH MY COUNTRY, SHAME!

Written for the Birmingham Ala. Age-Herald
"Washington, Lee, Douglas, these three, out the greatest of these—Douglas."
(Vide North Carolina's Legislature.)
Shame, oh my country! how the head,
Rebels what has been done—
A land beneath the sun,
You, see with leading and disgust,
Then turn away these eyes
From act so foul 'em heads of hell
With loathing would despise.
Put down the flag your fathers reared,
And tear it into shreds,
Let every Anglo-Saxon now
Beign not to raise their heads,
Call down the eagle from on high,
On flagpoles let him tread,
Since blackamoors and dastard knaves
Have stained your honored dead.
Let the day-god from his place on high
Recede and hide his face,
That darkness may come down and shield
Our land from such disgrace,
Put down the stars from heaven's dome,
Let midnight darkness reign,
Or, Phoenix-like, let justice rise
And wipe away the stain.
Where are the men of Mecklenburg,
Whose patriotic arms
Were first on North Carolina's heights
To strike freedom's first
How have they fallen now so low,
What has their pride become,
That they permit insult so base
To Lee and Washington.
And where, oh tell me where, the sons
Of that brave Spartan band,
Who fought through belts of battle fame,
To shield their native land?
Where are Virginia's sons, oh where?
I hear the heavens cry,
That they must so foul a shame,
And strike not, though they die.
And you, ye abolition horde,
Soe of your work the trend—
Black ingrates casting scorn upon
The names you should defend,
You would behold the writing palm,
(Or hand upon the wall)
Dishonored, bent and take the cup,
Yea, drink the bitter gall.
Your true Caucasian blood deny,
Your first and truest friend,
Bow down to serpents and to toads,
Tear down the stars from high,
Become as slimy, crawling worms,
And grovel in the soil,
For the name and lustre for a name,
Ye damned of man and God,
O. F. DOZIER.

A WIFE DISGRACED.

The Women Hang Their Heads in Shame Over Action of the General Assembly—A Populist's Daughter Writes to Her Father That Her Mother Feels Disgraced Because the Legislature Honors Douglas and Neglects Ex-Confederate Soldiers.

The following letter has been sent to the News and Observer with the request to publish it. It was either written by the daughter of a legislator to her father, or ought to have been written by a loving daughter who is so unfortunate as to have a father as a member of the Fusion branch of this General Assembly:

X ROADS, N. C., Feb. 26, 1895.

DEAR PA:—Knowing, as you did, that Ma was quite unwell, and having written to her that you would be sure to come home to see us last Saturday night; and knowing, as we did, that you had a free pass on the railroad, and that it would cost you nothing to come, you cannot imagine how greatly disappointed we were at your not coming. But Ma, who is always disposed to look on the bright side of things, said it might be that you were detained by some important legislative business, and that when the mail should come on Monday it would be explained. So we sat down to supper and tried to be as cheerful as we could under the circumstances. But every now and then Ma would sigh and say: "I feel just like some great trouble is coming upon us. I don't know why it is," she went on to say, "but I just feel miserable."

After supper Mr. Smith came over, thinking you were at home, to get the news from a Raleigh, and to hear how the Legislature was getting on. I was real glad that he did come, for I thought he would cheer Ma up and keep her from having the blues. But he had not been in the room five minutes before he told us about the House adopting a motion, made by a negro, to adjourn in honor of the memory of Fred Douglass, who married some fool of a white woman, and forever disgraced her race. I saw Ma's face turn red and then ashy pale, and she looked as if she would fall from her chair, and then I heard her say in a sort of undertone: "Oh, my Lord, I do wonder if he voted for that!" And she got right up and left the room. I followed her out, and found her on the back porch wringing her hands and saying: "Oh, my Lord, I do wonder if my husband voted for that!"

"No, ma," says I, "you know Pa did not vote to adjourn in honor of a negro who believed in and practiced miscegenation. Remember, Pa has daughters of his own, and you know he wouldn't vote to honor the memory of a negro who tried to pill down the barrier between the whites and the blacks and open the parlor doors of the whites to admit negro men to visit their daughters. Pa wouldn't do such a thing as that. Besides, I have heard Pa say, a thousand times, that he had rather die than to see the day when negro men should be allowed to marry white women; and you know, Ma," said I, "that after Pa was elected he said a number of times that he was just as much a Democrat as any man opposed to negro supremacy in the State as he ever was. So you may just know that Pa did not vote for that motion."

This pacified her somewhat, and after awhile she went into the house and went to bed; but I heard her groaning and moaning all night long, and I wished a thousand times that night as I lay there and listened to her that you had never heard of the Farmers' Alliance and of the Peoples' party, but that you were just like you used to be before you got to mixing with the Radicals and negroes.

Sunday was a gloomy day to us, notwithstanding it was so bright out doors. Ma had a bad headache and remained in bed most of the day, which I thought would do her good. She rested better Sunday night, and Monday morning she really seemed a little more cheerful and I thought she was getting along right well. The mail came over at 12 o'clock and being sure that she would get a letter from you, explaining why you did not come Saturday night, Ma met the mail boy at the door, and she took a hurried glance at the mail, but found no letter. Just then brother Tom opened the News and Observer and seeing a picture up in one corner, he said, "Hello, what's this, Ma," and all of us turned to look at the picture, and before I had made out what it was, Ma screamed and fell to the floor as if dead. We did not know what was the matter, for neither of us children had seen the picture well enough to know what it was. We carried Ma into her room and laid her on the bed and sent for Dr. Jones at once.

When he came we were telling him how the attack came on, referring to the fact that we were looking at a picture which brother Tom found in the paper, when she suddenly screamed out and fell senseless to the floor. The Doctor said that picture must have had something to do with bringing on the attack, and asked for the paper. After looking at it a moment he nodded his head and said: "Here it is," at the same time pointing to the picture representing the members of the Legislature weeping over Fred Douglass, the negro miscegenationist. "Here," said he, "is the cause of her sudden illness," pointing with his pencil to one of the men who stood weeping by the coffin. "Do you know him, Mary?" asked he. "Of course I do," said I; "that is my father. My father weeping over a negro whom I have heard him say many a time he heartily despised. And that was all I could say, for I felt like I could sink through the floor. Mother is still in bed, and the Doctor is apprehensive that the worst has not yet come. She is entirely beside herself, and ever and anon I hear her moaning: "Disgraced! disgraced!"

Oh, Pa, I do believe it will kill her.

Your disgraced daughter,
MARY.

A Halt Called.

The Populist caucus met last night in the Senate chamber and a gun went off. They said we want it understood we are Populists, and notice was served upon the Republicans.

To enumerate the proceedings without frill, it was determined to introduce a new bill looking to the aid of the Confederate monument, to defeat the proposed bill for the new criminal district leaving New Hanover and Mecklenburg undisturbed; "to take out the objectionable features" from the election bill; to fight the county government bill, until cancellation should be recognized in allowing two persons to be appointed of the opposite political party to the other three commissioners, so as to insure safety against the negroes in the East, to kill both Shaffer and Young Raleigh charter bills; to oppose the changing of any more charters, leaving Wilmington and Elizabeth City the only ones changed; to assert the individuality of the Populist party and to resist further swallowing up of their high-crowned organization by the Republican whale. The kick was lofty and complete, knocking over the milk and leaving the can high in the air. There must be rest for the wicked, unless the wicked one be an old sinner of the Lusk stripe. They don't need rest; their dwelling place is iniquity; but the Pops are calling a rest, and last night sounded the first long, strong note.—News & Observer, Thursday, Feb. 28th.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report

SOME WAR REMINISCENCES.

TO REACH NEW ENGLAND INVESTORS IN COTTON MILLS.

EDITORS COURIER:—For the past month I have been snowed under, but not idle all the time. I saw in my Farm and Fireside an advertisement of a history of the last war by Capt. Hurbert. Eager to learn all that I can from history concerning the last war, I ordered the book, and have read it carefully. I have read several histories of the late war, but Capt. Hurbert's is the most one-sided thing I have met with. He won't "tote fair" at all. Oh, for a correct history of the last war, to be handed down to future generations! Who will write it? I see that Northern writers charge Fitzhugh Lee with suppressing facts in his biography of his uncle, R. E. Lee. T. K. Oglesby, of Atlanta, Ga., is looking after them. "Tote fair," gentlemen. Don't stir up the coals of 1861-2-3-4.

President Cleveland and the United States Senate, and the North Carolina Legislature, and deadlocks in other States, gold bugism, etc., are enough to sufficiently amuse the public for awhile.

I took up my pencil, Mr. Editor, to write a few lines about the Person Regulators, but have wandered away off. Who were the Person Regulators? A company of 110 men, who left old Person in April, 1862, for Camp Maugum, near Raleigh. This company was mustered directly into the Confederate service, at Paine's old tavern, four miles south of Roxboro, by Col. M. C. Croton, first Colonel of the 50th North Carolina troops. My commission as Captain of the Regulators is dated Feb. 23, 1862, but it was in April when we were mustered into the Confederate service. From the muster roll there were 110 men enrolled, perhaps the largest company that left the county for the war. The election of officers was held in the old court house in Roxboro, by C. S. Winstead and Col. J. W. Hunt. I guess Col. Winstead remembers that election. I can never forget the day we left old Person for the war. We met at Bushy Fork, where the kind, hospitable people of that section—always noted for their hospitality—gave us a parting dinner, such a one as the boys never had again during the war. Lonzer Wilkies made us a parting speech—a feeling one, such as he could make. Our hearts were sad with the parting of loved ones; indeed it was a sad sight to witness the parting of man and wife, and parents and sons, who looked on us as we moved away, perhaps for the last time. Oh, how true! for many of the boys never returned. But our country called, and we felt it our duty to respond to the call and join our countrymen in defending our homes and our rights. Our first taste of battle was the Seven Days' fight around Richmond. The boys will never forget our encounter with the gunboats on the James River and the batteries on Malvern Hill. All will ever remember the terrific shelling we were under.

Mr. Editor, I have written these few lines, hoping they will draw out reminiscences from both officers and privates in the war. Let us read something else besides politics, and give the boys and girls some reminiscences of the great war that tried men's souls. Who will be the first to respond?

The History of Chaplain Service.

Rev. A. D. Betts, of Newbern, N. C., has been chosen to write a history of the chaplain service among the North Carolina troops during the late war. He must have the help of all the living chaplains. He wishes to hear from every one. They should tell him when their services began and ended, what regiment each served in and to what church each belonged and something of their experience and work during the war.

He urges the old soldiers also to write and tell him about the work of their dead chaplains. If the chaplain loved the soldiers enough to go to sleep on frozen ground, to preach to them, they ought to be glad to write about them. Let several hundred letters go to Newbern in a few weeks telling about the chaplains.—Wilmington Messenger.

Hick's For March.

Hick's says that the mercury will fall from the 3rd to the 12th, and that a storm period will begin about the fourth. Rain storms, amounting to floods in many localities will result; a sweeping blizzard in all North ern regions will not cause surprise. The regular storm period, central on the 29th, will extend from the 26th to the end of the month. About the new moon on the 26th, a marked change to warmer will take place. On this date the moon will come between our world and the sun, causing eclipse of the latter but not visible in this country. The heaviest storms of the period will most likely transpire within a day or two of the new moon. Possibly two distinct storm waves will pass over the country during this period, each followed by sharp cold and rising barometer.

Cure for Headache.

As a remedy for all forms of headache Electric Bitters has proved to be the very best. It effects a permanent cure and the most dreaded habitual sick headaches yield to its influence. We urge all who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and give this remedy a fair trial. In cases of habitual constipation Electric Bitters cures by giving the needed tone to the bowels, and few cases long resist the use of this medicine. Try it once. Large bottles only Fifty cents at J. De Morris'.

The Monroe Enquirer says there are twenty prisoners in Union jail, and while it is not supposed that a jail bird has any politics, yet that crowd congratulated itself upon the fact that there was not a Democrat in the whole lay out.

The Winston Republican says that Feb. 14, 1765, the site of Salem was selected. That was just about 130 years ago. Many great changes have been made since that time.

Doctors Say;

Bilious and Intermittent Fevers which prevail in miasmatic districts are invariably accompanied by derangements of the Stomach Liver and Bowels.

The Secret of Health. The liver is the great "driving wheel" in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged and disease is the result.

Tutt's Liver Pills

The Seducer Justly Punished.

Judge Timberlake passed through here yesterday on his way home to spend a few days. At the term of Catawba court, he sentenced Dr. Cromell, who was convicted of seduction, to the extreme limit of the law—five years in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $5,000. He says that there was not a single mitigating circumstance in the case in favor of Cromell, and no intimation that the young woman had not been chaste until her engagement to Dr. Cromell. Both parties are well connected and the case excited much interest.—News & Observer.

Does Your Boy Need Britannica?

It is the formative period. It is then that the mind is freest from care, the imagination unshackled, the memory most retentive, the eye brightest, and the nature most susceptible. What a boy reads in this period becomes so indelibly impressed upon his nature that it becomes a part of his very character.

It is a time when a parent's responsibility is greatest. It is not enough to tell the boy what he ought to become. Most boys are not even susceptible to didactic teaching. You can usually lead him a mile easier than you can drive him a rod. See that he has the proper surroundings, and a little encouragement, and it is surprising how readily he develops a taste for the best in literature. Let that taste be developed, and there is little danger as to his future. It was

Dr. Phillips Brooks

Who said: "Show me what books a boy reads, and I will read you his destiny." How important it is, then, that your boys should be provided with books of the highest character.

Fairy tales, and even, perhaps, "Buffalo Bill" stories, have their place as developers of a taste for reading, a sort of literary milk, as it were, but unless the boy soon shows a preference for the stronger matter of practical knowledge, history, novels, etc., you may be sure that he is mentally unendowed, or that there has been something radically wrong in his education.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica has rightly been termed "the concentrated essence of the whole world's wisdom." Let your boy read its interesting pages, and he will soon look with disdain upon "trashy" literature. We are continually underselling a boy's capacity for large ideas. There is nothing so attractive as truth. Give him the material out of which to construct large ideas. Put Britannica in the home, where he can consult it continually, and as he attains manhood he will be able to follow a professional life to which he may not aspire.

Seize the present opportunity to provide a prose library for your home. It requires an investment of but Ten Cents a day. If you order from THE GREAT BRITANNICA CO. while it may be had at introductory prices.
