And yet you will go on, day after day, with those horrid old cigars and me slaving my life away doing up lace curtains that mother gave us out of the very money she saved up with her own hands keeping hens, and hard enough, ton, I can tell you, with eggs only a cent each the very moment hens began laying as they ought to, and I'd like to know where you think you'll land, Julius Junius, if you keep on smoking your life away? Oh, but it is only a step-and for pity's sake I wish you'd fix that one to the front door before some caller trips over it and breaks the knob with her bonnet-and you know I've begged you on my bended knees to leave off before it's too late and not die suddenly, like this man you're reading about, with your life insurance run out, and bringing everlasting disgrace op your wife's family. #### That Sinking Feeling.

A good -ory is being told on one of Louisville's most prominent homeopathic physicians. Several days ago a young we man called at his office, and after discoursing on all the topics of interest of the day settled down to tell him her ailments. Among other things she said that she was greatly annoved with a sinking feeling. The physician prepared a little bottle of pills and gave them to her, with minute directions as to how they should be taken. The woman again began to talk, and after many vain efforts to get her out she started for the door. She had just opened it when she turned and said, "Oh, doctor, what shall I do if these pills do not cure me?" "Take the cork," he retorted. "They tell me that's good for a sinking feeling."
