MONARCHS AS BALLET DANCERS.

King Edward Graceful and Nimble Footed—Henry VIII's Pride.

One is not surprised to learn that Prince Edward of Wales is one of the most promising of all the dancing pupils at the Royal Naval College, Osborne, for skill in dancing seems to run in the royal blood of England.

Kind Edward in his younger days was as graceful and nimble a dancer as you would find in England, as many of his partners, now stately dowagers, love to recall; and so, with scarcely an exception, are all members of his family.

Henry VIII's dancing, from the paven to "conrato high," was the envy and despair of his courtiers, but no was prouder of his performance in the ballet.

Queen Elizabeth had no rival in the stately paven unless it was her favorite partner, Sir Christopher Hatton, and Queen Mary's grace and agility in the ballet seem more than one poet into rhymed raptures.

Charles II, however, seems to have been the king of royal dancers. He never knew when to stop, for when every one of his courtiers was dropping from fatigue he would call for a round of country dances. "Indeed," says Pepys, "he dances rarely."—Westminster Gazette.

A GUESSING GAME.

Take a sentence—in your mind of course; for instance, "You are a very good girl," and put it down on paper as follows: ! ! *! !! The dots represent the letters, the single lines the ends of words, and the double lines the end of a sentence. Next draw a rude picture of a gallows, like the letter F, with the cross piece hanging from the top instead of connected with the upright line. This piece is supposed to be the rope. If the guesser fails to guess correctly, he is to be hung on the gallows.

Now put down the letters of the alphabet, A B C D E F G H I J K L M N O P Q R S T U V W X Y Z, on a sheet of paper.

From this the guesser chooses a letter and if it belongs to the sentence it is written in place of the dots as many times as it occurs. If he chooses a letter not in the sentence, the head of the man goes on the rope. Each time he fails another part of the man is added, his body, arms and legs, and should the man be completed before the sentence is guessed the guesser loses his chance and has to be told, "If he is quick he may easily guess the sentences by a few guiding vowels."—Washington Star.

ORIENTAL SECRET TELEGRAPHY.

Strange Power of Communicating News Over Great Distances.

The hope that the movement of troops against the Zakka Khels will prove "a regular surprise" to these erring tribesmen leaves out of account the mystic Oriental power of rapidly and secretly communicating news over vast distances.

An instance of this strange faculty was furnished during the Indian frontier expedition against the Waziris in 1895. Seventy-five miles as the crow flies and 120 miles by mountain roads from their base at Sheik Budin the British troops defeated the Waziris. Heavy mist prevented the news of this success being telegraphed until the following day, when communication being opened up, the British officer at Sheik Budin anticipated the news of the victory by stating he had been informed of it by natives on the very evening of its occurrence.

The most famous instance of this sort is associated with the assassination of Lord Mayo by a convict in the Andaman Islands. Within a few hours of this murder an English official at Simla was told by his Pathan servant that the Viceroy was dead. Telegrams announcing the news did not arrive until the next day.

How such messages are transmitted is hidden from Europeans, but again and again in India, as also in Egypt during the Sudanese campaigns and in South Africa during the Boer war, the authenticity and speed in such native telegraphy were proved. —Dundee Advertiser.
