Week by week the tobacco market here keeps climbing, and no one seems to know where it going to end. Not within the memory of the oldest citizen has tobacco ever been known to sell for such high prices, and rarely have the buyers been so anxious to secure their share.

Last week the market sold 522.204 pounds for $158,721.75, which made the remarkable high average of $30.40 for everything offered during the entire week. Of course, no one can tell what tobacco is going to do, but the prevailing opinion is that it is going to be higher.
