THE GIRAFFE

Mr. Editor:- It seems we are having right much said on the subject of Evolution, and the prodigy of the Monkey, and now we are confronted with the Giraffe, who it seems, has gotten hit, by his highness (in his own estimation) and having reached his long neck over in some one elses pasture. He seems to be one of those good Sunday School attendants who are very studious to answer Sunday school questions with never a thought of putting them into service. It seems to me that this Giraffe writes like some Professor, a so called Preacher, therefore, the only in a County newspaper. "Something has been said."

CALICUM ARSENATE BURNS BEANS AND PEAS

Raleigh, N. C., June 3.-Many inquiries are being received at State College as to the crops that may be planted in the missing hills of cotton. A number of farmers have written to Dr. R. Y. Winters, plant breeding agronomist, asking information as to what crops to plant. These men state that where they planted snapbeans, soybeans or other bean crops and had to dust the cotton later with calicum arsenate, the beans were killed by the dust. "I find upon investigation," says Dr. Winters, "that the Irish potato is probably the only crop except cotton that is entirely resistant to calicum arsenate. It is possible, therefore, that a late planting of Irish potatoes could be used to advantage between long missing places. It is also possible to plant the beans after the last dusting has been given the cotton." The inquiries have been more numerous this year, thinks Dr. Winters, on account of the poor seed used in planting cotton and the resulting bad stands. Keep the pig greasy and save him from attacks of lice and mange mites. Add little creosote to the discarded oil from the flivver crankcase and let the pig use this freely.
