PACE EIGHT

THE CAMPING TRIP CONTINUED to a life of service in our Master's back, recorded in Caswell Co. N. C.

Good Morning! After a battle roval with the moson! es, in which they came out more than conquerors we although vanquished, slept the sleep of those who have fought a good fight with an unfinished foe. of his fine character, his noble life The fact is we fought while we slept, and knew it not.

The morning was bright and pleasant, with all the campers well and happy and hungry to boot. A delicious breakfast of ham and eggs, with all the accessories, served au naturel, soon hit the hungry spot, and every one felt re-enforced and cager for the journey and the Mecca of our dreams. Soon the dishes were washed; the tents folded and packed ,and with happy and hopeful hearts we bade farewell to our kind friends of the village of Bowling Green and faced our five Fords towards Washington.

The roads were good, the air bra-cing and pleasant, and the scenery along the way beautiful. After a few car adjustments we crossed the Potomae and drove into the Potomac Tourist Camp at 2 P. M. Tuesday. But hot! oh, so hot! It seemed impossible for us to bear it. We wondered if Person County was roasting as we were. We learned that it was.

Soon we secured our camp allotment from the keeper, built our kitchen out of Fords and tent covers, erected our sleeping tent, set all things in order, and made for the bath house where we took any kind of bath we wished- hot, cold or mixed-to our hearts content, all free of cost.

Then we cooked and ate our stylish supper, in our stylish way at the stylish hour of 6 o'clock. Then a rush was made for sight seeing in the great Capital. A few remained to protect our property and previsions, which we learned later was unnecessary as tourists do not steal nor destroy but protect each others fortune.

Description of the Tourists' Camp The camp is laid off in the plan of a city and large enough to accommodate thousands of people. It seemed pretty well filled with all sorts of tents, various arrangements, or attachments to automobiles, camping houses on wheels, etc. An inventory was made Wennesday it was found that every ight and state in the United Sates was represented on the grounds. In the various parts of this large camping ground you could turn a spigot for ice water and another for city water all free for 50 cents a day for each car. Also we had to keep our camp in sanitary condition, make no unnecessary noise, and be in camp by 11 o'clock at night-the hour of gate-closing.

Tuesday night was a night of much good sleep, the hard ground having a soothing effect after our tiresome day and sleepless night before. The morning found all fresh and ready for breakfast and for the sights of the city. I shall not give the details of our doings as it would require the making of a book, neither do I mention the places visited as another writer has already mentioned them.

The wonderful things in the National Museum charmed us and filled us with amazement, especially the various people of the world, their mode of living, their habits, and their way of doing things. Weeks could be spent in this museum and not see half the wonderful sights. Climbing the Washington Monument, yes, walking up, if you please, gave us great delight as well as great since this monument i exercise, 553 feet high. The wonders of the capital city and the scenery fo

Why Mr. Norwood Won't Back-Stand the Suit

A young lawyer at Paces, Virginia, has instituted a suit in Federal court asking the appointment of a receiver for the Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association. He wrote a letter, which was published, asking President George A. Norwood of the association for resources with which to prosecute the suit.

Here's Mr. Norwood's Reply

"I desire to say very frankly to you that I have had the opportunity to observe your activities against the association prior to the institution of this suit. I cannot convince myself that you are acting for the benefit of the association. I can only conclude that you are desirous of destroying it. You have stated to the Executive Committee of the association, in my presence, that you were not a member of the association, although you were eligible for membership. I cannot comprehend how a man who has refused to join this association and who has, since its organization, sold his tobacco at auction can be the 'disinterested friend' you claim to be.

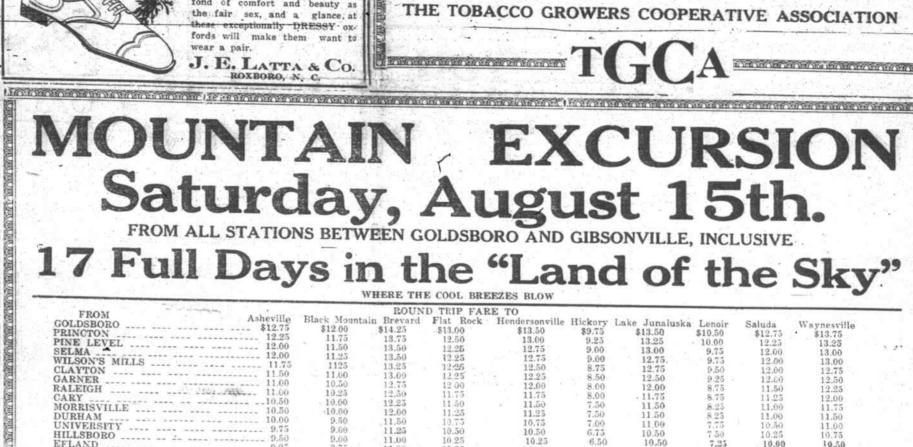

"I would remind you further that upon one occasion when you appeared before the Executive Committee you confessed that you had approached certain members of the association and sought employment with the promise to them that your services would cost them nothing.

"With these things in mind I cannot believe that the motives which actuate you now are different from the motives which actuated you then. I. therefore, cannot advise the board to lend you any assistance as a friend of this association."

WON'T ALL LOYAL MEMBERS' SAY "AMEN" TO THAT ?
