KEEPING UP WITH THE JONES'

Notwithstanding Mr. Babson and other noted business prognosticators, we have not been living in clover in this section for more than a year. In fact prosperity has not been a caller at the homes of many of us since nineteen hundred and nineteen. But what is the difference, we had lean years before that time, and certainly we have had lean years since, but if we should be blessed with good crops and good prices this year we will do just as we did before the lean years came on us—that is, we will spend just a little more than we earn and refuse to lay by a penny for the rainy day. Those of us who go to Sunday School, and every one should, have been studying about Jacob, how the Lord blessed him, but when the famine came he did not have any bread. And so it will be with us.

We are all too prone to howl about hard times, we have heard it all of our lives, and expect to hear it so long as we shall live, but that does not make us less guilty. The truth of the matter is, if all of us had lived during nineteen hundred and nineteen as we have lived the past year, there would have been no hard times in this good County. We would all have had enough in the bank to tide us over several lean years. We prate about the "high cost of living," when it is not the high cost of living, but "the cost of high living." Regardless of size of salary we all want to live like "the Jones'", the bank clerk thinks he must live just as does the president, the clerk in the dry goods store wants to dress just as extravagantly as does the merchant, and the clerk's wife oftentimes spends much more on dress than does the proprietors wife. You no longer can tell how rich a person is by the number of diamonds worn on the many fingers, and you can not tell how the man who sold the diamonds is scratching his head trying to think of a way to collect for those diamonds.

There is only one way to be independent, and that is, spend just a little less than you make. If you make little, spend little, and if you can not pay for what you want, then don't want it had enough to go into debt for it. We have simply gone wild on the question of spending, and this does not apply to any class, it takes in the business man, the man who works in a bank, store, the professional man and the farmer. We are all guilty, and unless we get down to sensible living we are always going to know what it is to be hard up, with hard times staring us in the face.

Don't worry about how "the Jones" live, think about how you live.

We know our corn club boys are feeling good just at this time, for that fine rain Sunday put them in fine spirits. Monday morning, before sunup, we drove by the acre which is being cultivated by our young club member, Estee Wrenn, and it is looking fine, just a little more than knee high, with not a sprig of grass in it, and as promising as any field we have seen this year. We hope to get out to see some of the other club boys now soon, and want to see all of their projects looking just as good as the one we saw Monday morning.

We hear from good authority that plans are already being made by the State Colleges to raid the treasury at the next sitting of the legislature. Governor McLean has made good his promise to give the people a business administration, and at the close of the year he will show a good surplus, probably a million dollars, and these institutions want it. Of course they do, and they will have such a lobby that it will take a man with a strong backbone to withstand it.

Primaries in this State look like thirty cents when compared to the primaries in Pennsylvania. The recent primary for Senator in that State cost about three million dollars.
