

Harvesting Grass Seed In North Carolina

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 18.—It is the unexpected that always gives the greatest thrill and the unexpected has certainly happened in North Carolina farming this fall. Folks are harvesting grass seed for planting purposes in that same territory where grass has been fought as a mortal enemy for years.

"The demand for carpet grass and lespedeza seed for planting pastures in the Coastal Plain section of North Carolina has always exceeded the supply and the planting of pastures has been retarded because of a lack of such seed," says Sam Jones Kirby, pasture specialist at State College. With the increased interest in livestock farming and the actual demonstrated possibilities for making excellent pastures on otherwise idle land, it appears that the acreage to pastures will be doubled this season. To supply some of the seed to be used in planting these pastures and to increase the profit from pastures already planted, some leading farmers are harvesting the seed. One county alone will harvest some 5,000 pounds of seed.

Three methods of harvesting the seed are described by Mr. Kirby. Dr. S. H. Croker of Wilson County uses a seed pan which he ran over two and one-half acres and saved 550 pounds of carpet grass and lespedeza seeds. These he sold at his barn door for 50 cents per pound. The Invershield Farm of Pender County clipped the heads of the grasses with a mowing machine while dew was on the grass and then harvested the seed with a flail when the heads had dried. The third method, used by other farmers, consists of mowing the head and raking them after which the whole amount of straw and seed are hauled to the new area and scattered over the land. This latter method is the least expensive and while some seed are killed during winter, enough remain viable to give a good stand of grass and clover.

Mr. Kirby states that there are many pastures free from weeds from which seed might be harvested profitably.

Low Seed Prices Increase Rye Acreage.

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 18.—The low price of pure seed rye of the Abruzzi variety will doubtless greatly increase the acreage to be planted to the crop this fall. One of the reasons for the tremendous increase in the acreage planted to soybeans all over the State this spring was the low price of soybeans last season.

"Good Abruzzi rye seed can now be bought for about the same price as the worthless Ryeen rye cost last fall," says E. C. Blair, extension agronomist at State College. "If we could only realize how badly our soils need organic matter and would then consider that three dollars for seed and labor will sow an acre of Abruzzi rye for turning under, there would not be a farm in North Carolina without some of this rye planted on it this fall. If the rye is planted now, it will more than pay for itself in the yield of late fall and early spring grazing. Then the benefit from turning it under next spring will be clear profit."

Mr. Blair states that the proper amount to sow is one and one-half bushels per acre. The seed may be drilled in or covered with a disk harrow. A one horse cultivator is fine for this purpose when the rye is planted between corn or cotton rows.

Mr. Blair states that there is plenty of good Abruzzi rye seed available. Many of the county agents have listed those farmers in their counties who have a surplus for sale.

The low price of cotton will make it imperative for those who grow this crop to make plans to secure their feedstuffs without great expense and rye grown on the home farm offers one of the most efficient ways of doing this.
