

What Is The Matter With Our Young People?

Dear Editor:

I hear this question so often asked; what is the matter with our young people of today? The way the majority are going seems very serious to me, and I think we should try to find the causes for so much wrong and restless living, and see if we can't do something to help matters.

I want to state a few of the things that I think are a hindrance to right living and the cause of a great many ruined lives. The public swimming pools where boys and girls go in together and that with almost no clothing is a sin and disgrace. The indecent styles which require almost no clothes; the rotten picture shows and other things all help to bring the young people down in the mire. Some may say this is not true, but if they are not direct causes, which they are in a great many cases, they lead to other things that are ruinous.

It seems to me that there should be steps taken to remove some of these evils from the paths of our young people. As long as such customs exist they will be a rule to be followed by them. For it takes a will stronger than that of us here, and a conviction that young people have and older ones lose, that matters to keep them from following the majority to a certain extent at least. Sometimes they go even against their better judgment, all because they are so ridiculous and do not want to be left by the crowd.

How are parents to succeed in training their children in the right way when there are so many evil influences posing as being all right things around to tear down any good work that has been done. "No one liveth to himself," neither can we bring up our children to themselves, and all know that everybody can't resist all temptations, especially while they are so young.

Now my point is this, we have been including a great many evils. Why don't we have others? I know this is not the most effective remedy, but if public sentiment acquiesces so much in doing so, why not have laws against some things it would help some. I don't think it is right to have laws to punish wrongdoers when they have grown

Poor Fertilizers May Be Corrected By Side Dressing

Under the uncertain conditions prevailing at the beginning of this cotton growing season, many farmers may have varied their usual fertilizer practices. True economy is always desirable, but buying low-grade fertilizer never is. It is a case of being "penny wise and a pound foolish." Poor fertilizer means a poor crop.

Fortunately, there still remains a remedy this season for the farmer whose cotton got off to a poor start as a result of using insufficient or improper fertilizer at planting time. If cotton plants appear poor and undernourished, they are probably hungry for nitrogen. The surest and quickest way to feed this nitrogen to the cotton is by applying a readily available plant food like nitrate of soda. The application should be from 150 to 200 pounds of soda per acre, put on one side of the row four or six inches from the cotton with a distributor or by hand. This is the method approved by leading agricultural experiment stations.

Applications made immediately after chomping will generally be found most satisfactory. Late side dressings do not ordinarily pay as well as the earlier ones.

With the knowledge that the things are all right that led them to their pain. It is said that account well is better than a cure. I think this is true, not only as well as physically speaking, but Christian people feel that we should take up our responsibility. If the present generation goes to ruin, or at least a large part of them, whose fault will it be. How shall the young people know how to live if they do not have the right kind of guides and how shall they be able to keep on the right track unless it is cleared to some extent so they will have room to travel.

Let's hear from others. I should like to know how others feel about this.

Watch Brown Rot In Peach Orchards

Raleigh, N. C., May 23.—A good set of fruit in the peach orchard may be made worthless in a short while by inroads of brown rot and scab, two serious fungus diseases.

"Peach brown rot is a common disease and produces a brown decay of the peach that spreads rapidly throughout the fruit tissues," explains G. W. Fant, plant disease specialist at State College. "In a few days the entire peach may become rotten and the disease causes heavy losses in poorly sprayed or unsprayed orchards. The brown rot spores spread the disease from affected fruits to healthy ones so that when conditions are favorable, a large part of the crop may soon become affected."

Mr. Fant states that peach scab is also a common disease which is confined to the surface of the fruit. It frequently results in a drying and cracking of the fruit tissue under the affected area. In severe cases where cracking occurs, the fruit is rendered worthless.

But both of these troubles may be controlled effectively by the application of suitable spray materials at the proper time. Ordinarily the peach becomes subject to brown rot and scab several weeks before ripening time. Spray applications coming about four weeks after the petals have fallen and again about four weeks before each variety is due to ripen will prevent the trouble. For these sprays the recently developed dry-mix sulphur may be used, Mr.

Fant states that the spray should be so applied as to reach all parts of the fruit.

It is profitable to collect and destroy the brown rot mummies during the fall and winter as an additional control measure. At this season, however, spraying is of greatest importance and is essential where sound fruit is desired.

Suffered weak, nervous

"I WAS in a very weakened, run-down condition, surely in need of a tonic and builder," says Mrs. J. R. Wrenn, of Anna, Texas. "I was so weak I had to go to bed, and kept getting weaker."

"I suffered with my back so much. I was very nervous, couldn't rest good at night. I couldn't eat anything—I just wasn't hungry."

"I had read so much of Cardui, I thought best to use it. I took seven or eight bottles, and by the time I had taken them I was stronger than I had been in several years. I can highly recommend Cardui."

Thousands of other women have found that the tonic effect of the pure vegetable ingredients of Cardui work just what they needed to help restore their appetites, to help bring them easily and naturally back to normal health and strength. Its action has been found to be of great benefit in many common female ailments.

Keep Fit!

Good Health Requires Good Elimination

TO be well, you must keep the blood stream free from impurities. If the kidney's lag, allowing body poisons to accumulate, a toxic condition is created. One is apt to feel dull, languid, tired and aching. A nagging backache is sometimes a symptom, with drowsy headaches and dizzy spells. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by burning or scanty passage of secretions. If you have reason to suspect improper kidney functioning, try Doan's Pills—a tested stimulant diuretic. Users praise them throughout the United States. Ask your neighbor!
