

Clean Farm Machinery Before Storing Away

Raleigh, N. C.—If farm machinery is to last, it is expected to give good service and is to pay a return for its cost, it must be stored in some place other than along the ditch bank or under trees.

There is no known type of farming profitable enough to pay dividends when machinery is allowed to become rusty and worn, is repaired with hay wire or permitted to stand in the weather during winter," says A. T. Holman, agricultural engineer at State College. "Some good farmers use one set of machines a lifetime, often exceeding 25 to 30 years of service, while other men add to the junk pile each year. The difference is due to management and care. Some men never permit their expensive implements to remain in the open when not in use; others seldom house their equipment. The essential care is to keep the machinery clean, house it properly and make repairs when needed."

Mr. Holman says that every farm needs an implement house. Such a house must have a good roof and a dry floor. It is best to build it so that all surface water, including water from the roof will drain away from the building. It is also advisable, he says, to locate the house so that the heavier equipment may be pulled in or out with a team. Other desirable features include a small repair shop at one end, large doors and a convenient arrangement for storing the machinery.

Before storing any machine, it should be given a thorough cleaning and oiling. The mud and dirt should be removed to prevent deterioration, says Mr. Holman. If this is not done, the agencies of rust and decay will continue even though the machines are stored. Those parts of the tools which work in the ground especially need oiling as do the bearings and exposed threads.

During idle time in winter repairs might be made so that the machines are ready when the rush of spring work comes.

Green Feed Needed For Winter Eggs

Raleigh, N. C.—Green feed added to the laying hen's ration in winter has increased egg production and has proven profitable wherever used.

"When the green feed pasture is exhausted with the coming of frost and cold weather, it is then necessary for the poultryman to provide such feed," recommends C. F. Parrish, poultry extension specialist at State College. "There is a wide variety of feed that may be used to avoid monotony. Rape, alfalfa, oats, clover, wheat, rye, barley, manna and other feeds may be used. Sprouted oats are also used effectively by some growers. The oats are fed when the ground is about three inches low and make an excellent succulent to supplement the scratch grain and mash."

Mr. Parrish says that it is not difficult to build a homemade oat-sprout. All that is needed is a number of trays with holes punched in the bottom to allow excess water to escape. The seed oats are spread thinly over the trays to prevent the formation of mold growth. Sprouted oats secured in this manner are fed at the rate of four cups to 100 hens per day per hen. A good producing hen will consume from 25 to 30 pounds of this feed in a winter.

Hay and cabbage about 18 inches from the floor will afford the laying hen needed exercise and will give her the succulent green feed needed. Hens may be used the same way.

When it is impossible to supply green feed, cod-liver oil may be mixed with the mash or grain ration to furnish the same food elements. In mixing this oil with the feed, Mr. Parrish suggests that a small amount of the feed be taken and the contents of one whole egg thoroughly and well mixed as a stock mixture with the remaining feed. One pint of the oil to each 100 pounds of feed is enough to use.

Will Plant Walnuts In Rowan County

Raleigh, N. C.—Black walnut timber and nuts will be plentiful in Rowan County for future generations of landowners if the plan now being promoted by County Agent W. C. Yeager is carried to a successful fruition.

"Mr. Yeager, cooperating with the rural school supervisor, has begun one of the most important and unique projects with the school children of Rowan County that I have observed in a number of years," says R. W. Graeber, extension forester at State College. "About 6,000 school children are now engaged in planting black walnut seed about over their home farms. The children are planting seed from the best trees with the idea of starting small groves on each farm. In addition they are preparing exhibits of seed which are entered at each rural school. From these the three best exhibits will be carried to a county-wide contest and the winning exhibit there will be used to furnish seed for planting black walnuts on the 80 or more rural school grounds of the county."

Mr. Graeber says that the plantings are being carefully supervised and will be conducted as a club project under Mr. Yeager's direction. A number of the schools have reported that 100 percent of their pupils have begun their plantings and no movement started recently among the young people has proven so popular as this.

Mr. Yeager reports that the plantings of the school ground will be carefully tended until the trees are beyond the nursery stage which insures at least a few trees around each building. Appropriate prizes are being secured to award to those children conducting the work most efficiently. Prizes are also offered for the exhibit of nuts which the young folks are bringing to their school houses.

In Memory

On Dec. 12th, 1928, at 7:30 o'clock, God sent His Guardian Angel to Mrs. Charlie Ford's home and took her loving husband, Charlie. He was almost forty-five years old. He had been in declining health for five years or more, but had been seriously ill for three or four weeks. His death was not a surprise to his family and friends. All was done by faithful Dr. H. M. Beam that could be done, but nothing could stay the cold hand of death. His dear wife was faithful to him in all his sickness to death. He was a member of Concord church. He leaves a wife and other relatives and a host of friends to mourn his departure. Let us all live so as we can be prepared to meet him where there is no more parting. The funeral was conducted by Rev. J. C. McCreary and Rev. M. Barcliff and his remains were tenderly laid to rest in Providence cemetery under a bank of flowers.

Pallbearers were as follows: W. E. Perkins, Grady Simpson, George Ford, Ed Flynn, V. W. Lacks, Jesse Hopwood. Flower bearers were: Mrs. Eva Robinson, Lonnie Suit, Nannie Beth Robinson, Hilda Perkins, Odell and O'Brian, Mrs. Fred Flynn.

Sleep on dear Charlie, take thy rest, We loved you, but God loved you best. Written by H. E. P.
