Social

A lovely birthday party was given on Wednesday night, Dec. 12, by Miss Maude Foushee in honor of her sister, Omega, at her home on the Hurdle Mills road. The guests were received at the door by Miss Foushee, and invited into the living room, where many interesting games were played. The first was "The Guessing Contest," which was won by Mr. Raymond Long. Second, "Name Contest," Miss Elma Foushee and Mr. Noah Davis being the winners. Third, "The Tree Game," which was won by Miss Omega Foushee and Mr. Riley Oakley. The last was a song contest. Mr. Jasper Whitfield, Miss Etta Wrenn and Mr. Marvin Burch had perfect answers. After the games Miss Maude Foushee assisted by Mrs. Wallace Foushee, served a salad course. There were about twenty-five present. Miss Foushee received many beautiful and useful gifts.

A lovely party was given on Friday afternoon when Mrs. T. W. Henderson delightfully entertained the Friday Afternoon Club. The home was decorated with Christmas ideas and beautiful potted plants. Boston Rock was played at four tables. After many interesting progressions the hostess, assisted by Mrs. B. E. Love, Mrs. W. D. Merritt, Mrs. J. J. Winstead and little Miss Anna Catherine Love, served quail on toast and all accessories, coffee, marshmallow pudding with whipped cream.

On Tuesday evening Mrs. B. B. Mangum gave an attractive rock party at her home, entertaining a few of her friends. The living room was attractive and Boston rock was played progressively, at four tables. After playing for quite a while, the guests were served a delightful sweet course by the hostess.

Prepare Old Hens To Produce Hatching Eggs

By H. K. Sanders

At this time of the year many of the old hens are out of production. Some poultrymen do not consider it they do the laying flock. Old hens should have special care and attention, for mature hens produce the best hatching eggs.

After the hen has gone through a year of laying she needs an opportunity to build up a reserve of energy for the next laying period. She should be fed liberally on grain to maintain body weight. Since she is growing feathers, mash is needed to aid in feather growth. In other words, feed the hen liberally on grain and mash in order to build her up and bring her into production early in the year.

Hens are more desirable for producing hatching eggs than pullets. They have gone through a laying season and have proven their worth in the flock, especially where culling has been done at the right time. Those hens that have molted late in the fall are the best ones in the flock. They have been at work all year when they have had the proper care, feed and attention, and by selecting the best from the old hens and mating them with roosters from pedigreed stock, the poultryman will find that the egg production will increase from year to year.

A standard of not less than 150 eggs per hen per year should be the goal set for the flock. Culling of the undesirable hens and pullets will help in bringing this about. Records should be kept so that you will know what your flock is doing, and you will know what to do for the future improvement of the flock.

Store Windows

Store windows make the holidays. The man who knows the art of window dressing well enough to make an effective Yuletide on New Year's display, contributes greatly to the general spirit of festivity on those days. This matter of window dressing is tremendously important. Where windows are attractive, the persons that pass on Main Street are made gayer, more alive by looking at them. They provide inspiration. They awaken ambition.

Streets with dull store windows seem dead in comparison to streets of decorated, illuminated shops. Streets with windows dressed tastefully, and in a novel manner, have a perennial charm.

This charm is in turn reflected in hundreds of homes—the homes of purchasers who have been lured by an attractive window.

If you are a merchant, remember to do your bit to make the holidays more colorful by paying a little more attention than usual to your window display.

Dr. Frank Crane Says:

THE TIME BINDER

Some professor, I noticed the other day in the public prints, referred to man as the time binder.

"GOOD WILL TO MEN"

The Christmas-tide should be a season, not of good cheer only, but also of good will. The struggle between competitors, even though carried on in the best of spirit, should be forgotten as we share each others' joys; not forgetful that even these happy days are not without their sorrows for many. We rejoice at every effort to bring peace and good will among the nations of the earth; hoping about "the union of those who love in the interest of those who suffer."

Watkins & Bullock "Everything To Build With"

I take it that what he meant is this—though, of course, being a professor, he probably meant something else, something you and I cannot understand. It is never quite safe to say you comprehend just what a professor means; he rather resents it, but, as I was saying, what he meant, or might, could, would or should have meant is this: Stones, sticks and all lifeless things are fixed, helpless and cannot move of themselves. They are the bound. So are the plants and all vegetable forms of life. Animals are space binders; that is they can move from place to place, and by their power of motion can bind together things remote. Man is also a space binder, because of his power of locomotion; but he is more. He can remember things in the past, and he can look forward to events in the future. Hence he is, a time binder. Man differs from the lower animals because he preserves his past experiences. He lives not only now, but all about his now flutter flocks of yesterday; for his now mountain he can see long tomorrow vistas. He is eternally planning. In proportion as he binds the future to him he becomes more of a man in every way. Many a silly word would be restrained, and many a rash action would be prevented by a consideration of the future. Every deed is to be judged not only by its present advisability, but by how it bears on our whole career.

SERGEANT & CLAYTON "THE STORE THAT LEADS" THE STA-KLEN STORE

Palace Theatre Play At Allensville School Great Success On Saturday evening the people of the Allensville community and delighted visitors were treated to an evening of real entertainment when the faculty of Allensville High School presented for their approval the play, "Eyes Of Love," at the school auditorium. The play was very successful, the entire cast of characters playing a part in its success. The performance of Misses Cornelia Thompson and Cleo Rogers and Mess. Earl Gentry and T. B. Thompson was outstanding, their playing rivaling that of professionals, while all the members of the cast showed much talent as stage artists. The plot of the play centered around the experiences and love affairs of Gailya—part played by Miss Rogers—the adopted daughter of Judge and Mrs. Barry, played by Earl Gentry and Miss Gladys Murray. Mr. Thompson played the important role of "Trusty Jim," the wrongfully accused convict, who, during an escape from prison, finds in Gailya his long lost daughter. Finally, Gailya marries the man of her choice, the maid and the butler fall in love, "Trusty Jim's" innocence is proven and all are happy. The play was supplied with an added attraction. Members of the famous Slaughter Band and other local musicians, between acts, furnished music that was pleasing and entertaining. In spite of the cold weather on Saturday evening, the players were greeted by a fairly large and very appreciative crowd, which enjoyed decidedly the best stage production given at Allensville in some time. Change In Durham-South Boston Line There has been a change in the Durham-Roxboro-South Boston bus line. Heretofore this line has been making only one round trip each day, but with the new schedule it will make two trips, leaving Durham at 8 a. m. and 2 p. m., leaving South Boston at 10 a. m. and 5 p. m. See schedule in another column. Sale of Personal Property On Tuesday, 10th Jan. 1929, on the premises at 12 o'clock, I will sell the personal property of the late Jim Wright Woody, embracing 2 black mules named Dan and Mattie, 6 and 7 years old, 1 porker, etc. This by request, and by mortgage recorded in Bk. 3, page 488. This Dec. 18, 1928. T. C. Brooks, Trustee. Death Of Mrs. Ashley Mrs. Robert Ashley of East Roxboro died at Watts hospital last Sunday morning at 12:50. Burial services were conducted from the home on Monday, interment being made in Burchwood cemetery.
