SECRETARY GOOD DIES IN HOSPITAL AT WASHINGTON

Head Of War Department Succumbs After Making Valiant Fight

BLOOD-POISONING IS CAUSE

Washington, Nov. 17.—James W. Good, Secretary of War, died tonight after blood-poisoning finally overwhelmed his courageous resistance.

The cabinet member died at Walter Reed Hospital, where last Wednesday he underwent an emergency operation for appendicitis.

He was unconscious throughout the day and hope had been abandoned hours before death occurred at 8:37 p. m.

Attending physicians were surprised, in view of Mr. Good's 63 years, by the vitality which enabled him to survive so long while infection permeated his system.

Several times this evening it was thought he had taken his last breath, but the doctors bent over him and discerned a faint life.

Just before lapsing into the final unconsciousness, the Secretary of War had turned to one of his physicians and said feebly:

"I have never lost a fight in my life, and I am not going to lose this one."

Toward the end opiates and oxygen were administered regularly to ease his pain and re-enforce his strength.

The stubborn determination to live persisted, but weakness from poisoned blood slowly overcame his tenacity.

Mrs. Good and their two sons were near the bedside when death came. Secretary Adams and Secretary Davis also were at the hospital tonight.

President Hoover was among the first to learn of the passing. He and Mrs. Hoover left the White House at once to go to the military hospital and comfort the widow of their friend.

More than half the population of the county have been immunized against typhoid and diphtheria, and 3723 school children have taken smallpox vaccination.

Some of our schools are 100 per cent smallpox vaccinated, and others are following close behind.—Health Nurse.

Blocked Sales During The Past Several Days

Roxboro Market Had Biggest Sales Last Week For This Season

SOLD 760,912 LBS. AV. $24.72

At the beginning of the season the warehousemen and the buyers set the goal for this year for ten million pounds, and now it looks as if this mark will be passed easily.

Last week was the biggest week the market has had this season, selling 760,912 pounds for $188,164.94, averaging for the week—and Friday's sales were included when a large portion of the tobacco offered was so soft that the buyers could hardly handle it—$24.72.

In comparison with one year ago to this date the market is considerably ahead, both in price and pounds.

It is most gratifying to every one in the manner in which the farmers have been standing by their home market, and they realize that there is no real reason why they should not patronize the home market and thus help build up the County, the town and every business enterprise in the County by dealing with their own friends and home folks.

N. C.-VA. TO REVIVE OLD GRID FEUD IN THANKSGIVING GAME

University Making Full Preparations To Handle Large Crowd Expected

IS ANNUAL 37-YEAR GAME

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 19.—Football fans are already circling "November 28" on their calendars, for that day will see written another chapter in the thrilling 37-year North Carolina-Virginia football rivalry.

This year's Thanksgiving classic is to be played in Kenan Stadium here, and fine showings by both teams give promise of one of the greatest Thanksgiving Day battles in the Southland.

The University is already preparing to accommodate a record crowd. Kenan Stadium seats 24,000 in comfort, and extra bleachers can be built if needed.

All approaches to the stadium are being put in tip-top shape, and new ones are being made.

Carolina beat Davidson 26-7 last Saturday to run its season scoring to 257, or an average of 32 points a game, which places Carolina just 13 points below Tennessee, the Southern Conference leader.

The Tar Heels have won seven games and lost only one, a hard fought 19-12 game to Georgia. Jack Magner and Pete Wyrick, backfield stars, are to be back in shape, to give virtually full strength against Virginia.

Virginia has had a creditable season record also and has been improving every game.

The Virginia team has a line of Seniors averaging 190, and a fine crew of backs headed by Johnny Solan, one of the best quarterbacks in the South.

The Tar Heels hold an edge in victories since the war, with five victories to three losses and two ties, but Virginia has had the better of the 37-year rivalry.

Close games generally mark the meetings. No team has won by as much as 14 points but once since the war, and the average difference in score has been but 4.2 points.

Carolina won 14-13 in 1927 and 24-20 last year.
