

Farming to Make A Living And Money

Columbia, S. C.—Farming to make a living and thereby making money is the method whereby the farmers of the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida are going to prove that farming is not only a mode of life but a desirable and profitable one, said F. H. Daniel, president of The Federal Land Bank of this city, while discussing the future of farming in these four states served by his bank. "Farming to make a living should be the first consideration of the great majority of farmers, for, that accomplished, they are at least assured of a living. It forms the mud sill from which they can build their other activities. A good home, a garden and forage crops for the live stock are essentials which, when provided, give the farmer a sense of security not enjoyed by many a dweller in the cities. With these in sight, with reasonable efficiency in farming in this area, the cash crops will produce the funds with which to pay the taxes, interest and upkeep and surplus besides.

"This is not theory," continued Mr. Daniel, "It has been demonstrated times without number. Possibly those who will agree with these statements most readily right at present are those thousands of farmers who left farms a few years ago to take employment in the cities, many of whom now are without jobs and some without funds with which again to establish themselves in the country. Many of them, however, do have funds and they or the sons who were brought up on the farm are purchasing farms again. It is indeed fortunate for them that they can now obtain properties at much lower prices than prevailed a few years ago. In fact, at prevailing prices, I sincerely believe there never was a time when there was such a good opportunity to obtain good farms at figures which insure a profit on reasonably efficient operation. The people of these southeastern states are not awake to the possibilities which lie before them. Back in the early nineties in the middle west the basis of many great fortunes was laid by the far-sighted individuals who realized that there would again be a demand for land and at much higher prices. Here we have a comparable situation, only, in my opinion, it is even greater than it was in the middle west three decades ago. The demand for farm land must increase. It is sure to do so as soon as it is fully realized that it is being offered at prices below its true value from the standpoint of earning power, as is the case today all over this territory. In what other part of the country is it possible for a few thousand dollars to purchase outright a farm unit which will afford a family a living, pay expenses and also a fair amount of net cash at the end of the year?"

And it isn't necessary for a prospective owner to make a large down payment.

"When the general public again realizes that one of the safest and soundest investments it can make is in the farm, the supply of farms which can be bought at current low prices will be quickly exhausted. Everyone knows how universal has been the suffering from the national debacle in speculation in the stock market. From the shell shock of that debacle the public has not yet recovered its sanity. It has developed a temerity even toward its own private enterprises and a deep skepticism toward others. As it gradually recovers, it will be astounded at its lack of business foresight in not investing in land during this period in which land values have declined to below pre-war levels.

"It is an economic axiom that when commodities fall to levels below the cost of production, it's a good time to buy. If anyone doubts that good farms can now be purchased for less than it would cost to clear them and erect the buildings, let him tackle the job. But the reproduction value is not always a guide to its current value. Present prices afford a good opportunity to purchase at figures upon which a real return on the investment can be made.

"The people to buy these farms already live in the communities where the farms are located. They are the best people to own the properties. There is a large population in these southeastern states and this area can utilize the products of every acre of tillable land properly farmed. We have no such farm problem as is faced in parts of the northwest where there is a sparse population. We need no immigration, for when we once awaken to our own possibilities, farms will not be available at the prices it is possible to purchase them today.

"The experience of The Federal Land Bank of Columbia in selling farms during the last year, in which we have sold more farms than ever before, leads me to believe that confidence in the fundamental value of land is returning and that it is only necessary to point out the facts to revive it completely," concluded Mr. Daniel.

WOMAN VICTIM OF BURNING BUS

Mrs. Minnie Suggs, Of Greenville, Perishes In Flames From Gas Tank

Kinston, May 17.—Mrs. Minnie Suggs of Greenville, was burned to death in a bus accident at Moccasin River, twelve miles from here, shortly before noon today. The driver, Lloyd Pritchard, is in a hospital here with severe burns. An axle on the bus, operated by Kinston interests between Fayetteville and Washington, D. C., broke on a curve near the main highway bridge across the river, a wheel ran off and friction sparks from the brake drum dragging over the highway set fire to the gas tank. The vehicle was instantly enveloped in flames. It ran a few yards and stopped in front of a filling station at the end of the bridge.

The driver, his clothing in flames, opened a door and tumbled out on the ground. His life was saved by a man who secured a fire extinguisher from the station and ran to his aid. Mrs. Suggs, the only passenger, could not be reached. The fire was so hot the woodwork on the bus was consumed in a few minutes. There was no explosion. The tank cap was believed to have been shaken off when the axle broke.

Farlie A. Garner, Lenoir county coroner, took charge of the woman's body, who could not be immediately identified.

She boarded the bus at Kenansville and was to have left it at Greenville.

Pritchard, the youthful driver, who lives here, suffered burns on the face, arms and body. He will recover, it is believed.

Mrs. Suggs who was prominently connected in Pitt and Greene counties was sixty years old. She was returning to Greenville from Wilmington.

In Memory Of G. M. Lunsford

On Wednesday, February 25, 1931, the death angel was sent to the home of Mrs. Ida Lunsford and took from her a devoted husband, and true loving father. God needed him to fill a vacant place before the throne. All was done for him that doctors and loving hands could do, but nothing could stay the cold hand of death. He was always ready to help his friends, neighbors and any one he could. He will be greatly missed by all. He was a true and loving neighbor. It was hard to give him up, but God knows best for us. We must hope to meet him in that beautiful land. He leaves to mourn a sad, broken-hearted wife, one son, daughter, mother, father, and three brothers. Written by L. M. V.

JESUS PREPARING FOR THE END

Luke 22:7-23

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

At all times Jesus of Nazareth was loyal to His Jewish extraction. He observed the Sabbath, made full use of the synagogue and kept the Hebrew feasts. His work during recent weeks had the Jewish Passover as its objective. Preparation was made on Thursday of what we now call Holy Week. With His disciples He proceeds to Jerusalem and instructs how they may find the room where they will keep the feast. It was easy to follow the lead for they were to find a man bearing a pitcher of water, whereas water carrying was the job for women. It is thought that John Mark was the young man and that he led them to the house of his mother, Mary.

A most significant act took place when Jesus washed the feet of all, since each one of the disciples purposely avoided this customary duty lest he appear to belittle himself and have a lesser place in the Kingdom they expected the Leader to establish.

Following the Passover meal and the departure of Judas, Jesus performed one of the few acts that dealt with organization. He took some of the unleavened bread and gave to it the significance of His body that was about to be yielded up on the cross. The cup typified His shed blood. These emblems were to be taken by His disciples throughout all times as memorials of the gift of Self on the cross on the morrow. Thus we have the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, through which we make confession of Christ as our Saviour. Read the table conversation in John 14, 15, 16, and note the prayer of Jesus in that upper room as recorded in chapter 17. "This do in remembrance of me" is the abiding command to all believers.
