The Way of Life
By Bruce Barton

SUNKEN PILLARS

I went to a function where a brilliant young man received a distinguished honor. Fine speeches about him were made, and the mayor presented a gold medal.

Back near the door sat a demure old couple who seemed ill at ease. Their faces were lined; their hands showed the marks of hard labor. They alone of all the guests did not wear evening clothes.

But when the young man came down from the platform he strode quickly across the room and, reaching the old couple, put his arms around them.

The audience cheered.

I thought of Thomas Carlyle who, when fame came to him, looked back from the fashionable society of London to the rugged farm where he had grown up, and the humble parents whose self-sacrifice had made his career possible. Said he:

"I feel to my father, so great though neglected, so generous always towards me, a strange tenderness peculiar to the case, infinitely soft and near my heart. Was he not a sacrifice to me?"

And he added: "I can see his life in some measure as the sunken pillar on which mine was to be built. Had I stood in his place, could he not have stood in mine and more?"

I thought of the father of Robert Burns and the "pains he took to get proper schooling for his boys, and when that was no longer possible, the sense and resolution with which he set himself to supply the deficiency by his own influence. For many years he was their chief companion; he spoke to them seriously on all subjects as if they were grown men; at night, when work was over, he taught them arithmetic; he borrowed books for them on history, science, and theology . . . He would go to his daughter as she stayed afield herding cattle, to teach her the names of the grasses and wild flowers, or to sit by her side when it thundered."

I thought of the father of John Stuart Mill, neglecting his own interests in order to work patiently at the education of his boy; of Thomas Lincoln, struggling to keep his poverty-stricken family together—of all the uncounted hosts of hidden fathers . . . "sunken pillars" . . . who suffered oblivion cheerfully in order that their sons might rise.

It would be fairer if every life could be measured by a double standard—first, by its own achievement; second, by the careers of its children. On this basis many obscure lives become glorious.

And many a medal, placed in the strong, achieving hands of brilliant youth, should be passed back to the gnarled hands of the little old couple sitting shyly by the door.

Meeting Of Review Club Held Thursday

A splendid meeting of the Review Club was held Thursday afternoon with Mrs. A. J. McKelway. The guests were met at the door by the hostess and invited into the living room where a profusion of bright spring flowers were attractively arranged.

The subject for the afternoon was "Tragedy," and Mrs. H. K. Sanders read one of the most interesting papers of the year, Shakespeare's play, "Hamlet." This paper showed careful study and was thoroughly enjoyed. Mrs. Lillian Foreman led the discussion, comparing Hamlet with Ibsen's Ghost. The program was also featured by several lovely musical numbers played by Mrs. K. L. Street and sung by Mrs. H. W. Newell and Mrs. A. J. McKelway.

The dining-room, to which the guests were then invited, was beautifully decorated. A two-course luncheon was served by Mrs. McKelway, assisted by Mrs. J. H. Hughes and Mrs. B. B. Newell. Invited guests in addition to club members included: Miss Woodside, Mrs. Bourne, Mrs. West, and Mrs. Stewart.

Mrs. Burns Entertains The Contract Club

Mrs. A. M. Burns-entertained the Contract Club and a few other guests on Tuesday afternoon. The home was decorated for the occasion by the use of pink and white peonies and red roses. Four tables were arranged for Bridge. After playing many interesting progressive high score was couated and for contract Mrs. W. H. Morris was given cards, while for auction, Mrs. W. C. Bullock was presented with a double deck of cards. The hostess, assisted by Mrs. A. S. deVlaming, served a delicious salad course with coffee and strawberry short cake.

Miss Dunlap Hostess At Bridge Party

A lovely party was given on Tuesday evening by Miss Mary Marshall Dunlap when she entertained her bridge club and several other guests. The living room was very attractively decorated and four tables were placed for the interesting game of Auction Bridge. Mrs. Landon Harvey was given several dainty handkerchiefs for high score prize. The hostess served an ice course.

New Guernsey Blood Brought To The State

Dairymen of North Carolina are indebted to Mr. Hill for his unselfish action in bringing the 25 heifers to this State," says Mr. Arey. "Not only did he guarantee all expenses in connection with buying the calves and holding the sale but he also turned back to the successful bidders their proportionate share of the profits made. In this manner, he made it possible for prospective Guernsey breeders to get some good foundation stock of the best blood in America at a comparatively low cost."

Mr. Arey says that Mr. Hill has offered a sterling silver trophy cup to the club boy or girl making the best record with their Guernsey calf club work. The winning club member will have his name engraved on the cup each year.

Mr. Winstead Able To Be At His Office

Mr. S. G. Winstead, our popular County Superintendent of Education, is able to be in his office after several days illness. It was fortunate for the schools that his illness came just when it did, for most of the schools had closed and his work was mainly office work.
