

MANY TAKING STANDARD FIRST AID COURSE

During this week the North Carolina Industrial Commission through the cooperation of the Roxboro Chapter of The American Red Cross is offering the Standard First Aid and Safety Course to the local industries. Classes are being held from 8:30 to 11:30 A. M. and 3:30 to 6:30 P. M. in the farmer's room at the courthouse and the community hall.

First aid does not take the place of a doctor; but in some instances a trained first-aid may save a life before the arrival of a physician or the patient can come under his care. What NOT TO DO as well as what TO DO is stressed. Special emphasis is put on the following: (1) The control of arterial bleeding; (2) Artificial respiration; (3) Care of shock; (4) Proper transportation of an injured or wounded victim; (5) Care and treatment of minor wounds, scratches, and abrasions.

The following industries and representatives are taking advantage of the course: Roxboro Mills, Longhurst Plant; J. S. Beaver, B. T. Bumgardner, A. J. Chester, G. L. Rhew, W. W. Morrell; Roxboro Mills; Henry Carver, E. W. Corin, J. H. Cozart, J. B. Dunn, W. E. Oakley, Dewey Shelton, P. M. White, R. R. Yarboro; Roxboro Broom Works; Miss Ruth Harris; John Watts Sons Co.; Miss Emma Whitfield, Miss Virginia Whitfield, R. C. Lee, Jr., Roy Oakley; William McKetham Lumber Company; H. E. Ritchie, R. F. slightly. The Ford finally stopped near the right-of-way of the Norfolk & Western railway with a front wheel torn down and other damages to the car. None of the occupants of the car were injured, nor was Mr. Bowen, who was alone in the truck. Mr. Cash was arrested last night, it being alleged that he was driving while intoxicated, and also that he attempted to get away after the smash-up. He is at liberty under bond.

SHELBY HAS A FIDDLE FACTORY

Believe it or not—Shelby has a music factory where genuine violins or "fiddles" and a number of other stringed instruments are made.

Not a large factory to be sure, but they are made here. In fact, they are made by hand and the owner and maker guarantees them to be as good as "store bought" instruments of any make.

J. A. Jones who lives over on Elm street has a little shop where he takes a few simple tools such as a block-plane, a handsaw, and a chisel or two and carefully fashions from selected maple and spruce strips into violins, banjos and ukas. He can make any kind of fretted instrument he likes and has been making them for 40 years.

To those who are skeptical Mr. Jones refers them to Flay Gardner who has one of the violins valued at $150.

Reminiscent of the days when old Stradivarius made his famous instruments in Cremona, Mr. Jones is a quite singular gentleman. With twinkling blue eyes, the long hair and soft voice of a horn musician, he makes his instruments not only for what little money they bring him but for the sheer love of his art.

His father made violins in the mills of upper Cleveland county years ago and taught him how to be proficient at the craft, and now he spends as much as three months making the kind of instrument he wants. He knows and loves music and has for a long time been a music teacher.—Cleveland Star.
