and Lieutenant Governor faced each other across the capital and the members lined the corridors. The two gavels rose and fell together and the session was ended.

Security Legislation

Talk of a special session was general in the hectic last hours. But Representative Greg Cherry of Gaston and others offered an administration-sponsored measure which the Finance Chairman declared might obviate the necessity of a special session to consider co-operation in federal social security legislation.

Passed quickly by the House and Senate, the measure will authorize the Governor and Council of State to set up machinery in any State department which they may select to carry out the unemployment insurance program now pending in the National Senate.

The contemplated national act would tax employers to create and unemployment compensation fund. North Carolina workers would secure no benefits from this fund unless machinery to administer it should be provided, stated Mr. Cherry, and that North Carolina would receive some $80,000 to administer the program.

Special Liquor Session

The possibility that liquor legislation again would be brought up in the event of the special session was a principal topic of discussion among the homeward-bound law-makers yesterday.

Wets completed their work of making a jigsaw puzzle out of the State's map at the final session of the House.

Last minute victories by the drys in keeping several counties out of wet-dry referendum bills did little to ameliorate their defeat at the hands of the wet forces which hacked away bit by bit the 12-year-old Turlington Act. The reversal in tactics of the drys, which began in the Senate early yesterday morning when Dry Senator Paul Grady moved to reconsider the Day State-wide referendum bill, finally was abandoned as the impatient legislators rushed towards adjournment.

Speaker Fails

Speaker Robert Grady Johnson himself stepped down from the chair in the House to attempt to stop the "piecemeal nullification" of the dry laws which was completed in the House yesterday, when that body accepted Senate amendments to the Pasquotank County referendum bill and thereby provided for liquor votes in 16 counties in addition to New Hanover, for which a referendum bill was passed Friday.

"I suggest that the House and Senate recess and appoint a joint committee to draft a new State-wide referendum bill and present it to us next Wednesday," said Speaker Johnson.

Declaring that neither drys nor wets were satisfied with what they had done, he stated that he would "rather see the Legislature stay here another week" than to leave matters as they stood at the end of the House session. "Politically speaking," he said, "I think this is a dangerous bill."

"Most Vicious Bill"

Opening discussion on the amended Pasquotank County bill, former Speaker R. L. Harris of Person declared, "This is the most vicious bill I've ever been called to vote on." He termed it a "hodge-podge" measure conceived in haste.

As Mr. Harris suggested and Representative N. E. Day of Onslow admitted, amendments to the bill did not show clearly whether or not Onslow Co. was included in the bill. Onslow originally was included in amendments offered in the Senate but Senator E. W. Summersill intended to withdraw it.

Despite objections by Mr. Harris and pleadings of Representative R. L. Carr of Duplin, rock grounded dry of the House, the amended Pasquotank Co. bill passed. Representative W. L. Lumpkin spoke for the measure.

The Franklin member asserted that the measure is sufficiently safe-guarded by provisions which allow county commissioners in the counties designated by the bill to decide the question of calling an election and which requires that the people vote for county liquor stores before they are established. Local liquor stores may be established in Southern Pines and Pinehurst in Moore County upon petition of a majority of the voters.

By one maneuver or another, the drys blocked passage of bills to include the counties of Durham, Chowan and Lee in the provisions of the referendum bill. However, the drys lost once again when the Calendar Committee reported unfavorably Senator T. H. Steele's bill to exempt a dozen counties from the Coburn wine manufacturing bill passed Thursday. A move to override the committee's action was unsuccessful.

It was after the referendum bill passed that Speaker Johnson made the plea for the House to proceed in a more orderly manner on the liquor question. Declaring that he was "personally dripping wet," the Speaker said that he had voted dry out of deference to Pender County's position.

Following the Speaker's plea, Representative W. F. School of Mecklenburg offered a resolution to postpone a committee to draft a State-wide liquor bill to be presented to the Assembly next Wednesday.

While Speaker Johnson and leaders of both the wets and drys conferred with the Governor, it was evident upstairs in the Hall of the House that the strongest type of appeal and leadership would be needed to hold the Legislature in session longer. From across the rotunda, expressions of the same sentiment were heard. Though not satisfied completely with their work, the Legislators were ready to decamp from the Capitol.

"I think we've made a mess of things," said Representative Cherry, "and the only thing I know to do to stand by it. Let's adjourn and go home."

Before adjourning, the General Assembly patched up the tax foreclosure laws somewhat by passing a bill to bring in all necessary parties in tax suits now pending in the State. The House Calendar Committee on Friday rejected an administration measure to
