

WASHINGTON SNAP - SHOTS

As the last days of the long session of Congress come, a recapitulation of its appropriations shows the staggering total of over $9,000,000,000. In other words, Congress reached down into the taxpayers' pocket at the rate of more than one billion dollars a month. In addition, it enacted the so-called Social Security bill which will levy taxes upon industrial payrolls for unemployment reserves and old age pensions totalling billions over a period of years unless it is declared unconstitutional.

For the three years beginning in 1933 and ending with the fiscal year 1936 the spending as outlined will reach a total of $24,000,000,000. Oddly enough, this was the total cost of the Federal Government from the first term of George Washington to the first term of Woodrow Wilson—124 years. It was not until the late twenties that the first peacetime Federal budget went above $4,000,000,000, and that was news at that time.

Breaking down the $24,000,000,000 into simpler terms, it represents $12 for every man, woman and child in the entire world, and nearly $1,000 for each family in the United States. Senator Byrd of Virginia has figured that the Government is spending $13,000 every minute of the day and night, with $7,000 of this being added to the public debt which must be paid by generations yet unborn. Over and above all of this spending, the state, county and city governments are exacting their toll from the taxpayer.

The House and the Administration beat down efforts of the Senate Finance Committee, led by Democratic Senators, to turn the tax bill into a legitimate revenue raising measure designed to begin balancing the budget. However, it would have been with out precedent for a political party to enact a large tax bill just before National elections, except as a political gesture aimed at a small group of voters, as is the Administration bill. But, with the election out of the way there is no doubt that taxation will be a paramount question before Congress and the voters for years to come. Accepting money from the Government is one thing, but paying taxes to make up the deficit is something else again and far less popular politically.

radical legislation are being borne out as the year moves on. Steel production is climbing, and the automobile industry is mapping its program for next year confidently. Production for 1935 is expected to reach 3,100,000 units, far above last year.

"Business generally is better," said W. S. Knudsen, vice-president of General Motors. "The general picture is improving right along. We note more optimism in those with whom we come in contact in our business."

"Can these salutary conditions be credited to the New Deal?" he was asked. "No," Mr. Knudsen replied, "I lay it to the Lord, He is not worried about 1936 being a Presidential campaign year. To be pessimistic about next year, one has to feel that incomes will come down. As long as they are going up, business is bound to be better."

The newest political force to develop during this session of Congress was the stockholders in corporations over the country. Estimates of their number range from 10,000,000 to 20,000,000. Threatened with losses by the public utility legislation and the tax bill, they were heard from by Congress by the thousands. As yet they are an unknown quantity but are likely to be a powerful influence in future sessions of Congress as they awaken to the realization that attacks on business are attacks on their income.

Louisa's Letter

ANSWERS TO PROBLEMS FROM WRITERS

Dear Louisa:

I am to be married this month. My lance is quite able to support me but it seems a shame to give up the good job I have had for five years. I wonder if the extra money I would make would be more important than putting the time on my new home which my husband is giving me for a wedding present.

ALINE G.

ANSWER:

If your job is just routine work and if the money is your only inducement to keep on working, I advise you most earnestly to give up your job and put your time and thoughts on making a charming home and rearing a pleasant family. Such a course will reward you many times more than a few dollars in the bank.

If your husband was struggling to get along and had to pinch pennies, my advice might be different. Under such circumstances it would probably be better to help him along financially for a few years, at least. But in your case, you are not worried over finances. Your husband presents you with a nice home and believe me, my dear, this thing of keeping a home lovely and comfortable, of making social contacts for your husband's and your own pleasure, as well as interest, is not such a casual job as it seems. And if you put off having your family very long, some times one never has a family. This is really a tragedy for life is not complete without children.

So, I say, give up your job with its few extra dollars and you will find hundreds of worthwhile ways to spend your time until the family arrives.

LOUISA

Dear Louisa:

You wrote a letter a while back saying that every one should take a vacation. But what would you do if every time you planned to go away some relative would write that they were coming down to spend a few days or a few weeks with you? That has happened three times this summer and I have had to unpack my things and go back to the kitchen, as we have no servant.

If our visitors had been my own family, I could have written them not to come, but my husband would have been awfully hurt if I had refused to entertain his people:

H. E. M.

ANSWER:

Really, H. E. M., I have never understood why anybody who invited themselves places should feel hurt if their hostess asked them to put their visit off until later as it suited her better to have them then. It seems to me that if one knows a person well enough to invite themselves at a specified time that the person should be intimate enough with them to let them know whether it suits or not.

Personally, I think any one has a fearful crust to write, "I am coming down Monday," unless they add, "if it is convenient." No matter how intimate they are or how close kin they may be.

If your husband is particularly anxious to see, for example, his sister, and she wishes to come just as you are planning a trip, why not write and tell her how sorry you are that you will be away just at that time, but how delighted John will be to have her while you are gone, if it doesn't suit her to come later. Certainly no one should feel hurt over such a reply.

At any rate, if I were you, I should most certainly take my vacation, regardless of whether all my relatives got them or not, at my expense.

Weevil Infestations Reach Serious Stage

Boll weevil infestations in North Carolina are becoming serious in many sections, according to C. H. Brannon, extension entomologist at State College.

Recent observations have shown that the weevils have spread over most of the Piedmont area. This year weevils are attacking many farms where they have not appeared in appreciable numbers before.

Over practically all the cotton growing area of Eastern North Carolina weevils are now being found, Brannon said, and the increase has been heavy within the past two weeks.

In cloudy, warm weather prevails during the rest of August, he continued; weevil damage over most of the State will be really serious unless effective control measures are started at once.

He recommended that growers who find weevils in their cotton should start dusting with calcium arsenate or a half-and-half mixture of lime and calcium arsenate. Since the infestations are so widely spread, he urged that every farmer keep a close lookout for weevils.

Six pounds of dust should be sprayed on each acre of cotton, Brannon stated. The plants do not need to be coated with a heavy layer of dust, but the spray should be heavy enough to send a good fog of dust about the plants.

Brannon also urged the growers to keep a sharp watch for red spider, which is being found in a large number of fields this year. As a control measure, he stated that at least two dustings of sulphur should be made about a week apart. Ten pounds should be applied to the acre.

Keep a Good Laxative always in your home

Among the necessities of home is a good, reliable laxative. Don't be without one! Do your best to prevent constipation. Don't neglect it when you feel any of its disagreeable symptoms coming on. . . "We have used Theodor's Black-Draught for 21 years and have found it a very useful medicine that every family ought to have in their home," writes Mrs. Perry Hicks, of Belton, Texas. "I take Black-Draught for biliousness, constipation and other ills where a good laxative or purgative is needed. I have always found Black-Draught gives good results."
