

Noe, Smarting From Action, Making Fight

Louisiana Lieutenant Governor Says He Is Going To Put "Out The Best Ticket"

New Orleans, Sept. 23—Smarting from being ignored by the Huey P. Long machine, Lieutenant Governor James A. Noe today said he was going to put "out the best ticket in the field" in the January democratic primary.

Left off the administration ticket after he had jumped the gun and announced his candidacy for governor, Noe engaged in a fist fight with a Long leader at Monroe yesterday and returned here with a bruised left hand today to announce his opposition to the regular machine.

Was Red Hot

Noe was red hot Saturday night when the caucus of the political organization left by the assassinated Huey P. Long refused to endorse him for governor and gave their support of Judge Richard W. Leche, an appointee of Governor O. K. Allen to the state court of appeal.

Several days ago the lieutenant governor, formerly one of the closest political allies of Long, took the jump on the caucus after a private caucus with Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, "share-the-wealth" clubs organizer and John B. Fournet, justice of the state supreme court, and formally announced for governor.

He said in his announcement that Governor Allen had favored his candidacy, but after a riotous all day caucus that ran up into the night, the Allen gubernatorial endorsement went to Leche as a compromise between Noe and Allen Ellender, speaker of the house.

Yesterday Noe spoke before a "share the wealth memorial" rally in his home city of Monroe, taking the place of Smith, who was booked as the principal speaker but did not appear.

Last night, witnesses said, Noe approached A. K. Kirkpatrick, a state administration political leader in a Monroe hotel lobby and accused Kirkpatrick of telling "me a damn lie."

Kirkpatrick Felled

The argument was brief and two blows wielded by the disappointed lieutenant governor felled Kirkpatrick and he was picked up by his friends who stopped the fight.

Noe said here that after he had conferred with Fournet he might make an "explanation" of his fight.

"Are you still in the race?" Noe was asked.

"Stronger than ever," he replied. "Are you going to run singlehanded, or are you going to have a complete ticket?" he was asked.

"I am going to get the boys together and will have the best ticket in the field," Noe said. "That meeting at Monroe yesterday showed whether they wanted me or not. There were between 10,000 and 15,000 present and the reception which I received convinced me more than ever that I am the logical candidate for governor."

Noe's announced determination to get out his own slate of candidates today kept the Long-Allen machine in a state of wild confusion while the anti-Long political faction quickly sat down to complete their ticket.

While the administration caucus was battling and trading to complete its ticket Saturday, Cleveland Dear, eighth district representative in congress, formally announced his candidacy for governor.

His platform called for repeal of the dictatorship set up by the late Long and repeal of all state laws which have aroused the enmity of the Roosevelt national administration against the political reign in Louisiana.
