EDUCATION IN THE CRU-CIBLE.

The grand paean which has been sounding in praise of Amer ican education since the awaken ing of twenty years ago seems now to be giving place to a dismal wail over our low scholastic ideals. In some quarters, at least, there is a marked tendency to criticize and condemn rather than to appland and approve. Some months ago, it may be recalled, a writer in a popular magazine discussed at length the degeneration of American educators, and gave week. us to understand that many professors in our leading institutions were utterly devoid of both moral principles and religious instincts More recently, a distinguished bishop has issued a solemn warning against American universities. All are bad, he says, and all are heretical

In the current issue of the Atlantic Monthly, Hugo Munsterberg, of Harvard, presents an other phase of the subject and strongly laments the lack of appreciation for scholarship in this country. His reasoning is interesting. One elective system and lack of educational purpose, he thinks, have produced careless thought, feelde, annies tuition and reckless scholarship. Leach ers, he says, realize conditions as they are and see signs of a coming change. More exact stand ards must be prescribed, more important knowledge must be in stilled and more dignity must be given to study. His solution of the problem thus propounded is purely academic. Such reasoning is both right and wrong

Education is a state of mim and not a mass of information After a student has spent four years in a medley of faotball. fraternities, german clubs and hazing bees, he finds that he is lacking more in the intellectual viewpoint than in mere information. For the latter he has as in parameely inthe use, but the former he must have whatever his held of work. When the ed leges of today fully fealize this in the work or tomorous they are see that the first generalistics students get that inental some ment which as a chable friend t excel in the barrle of line

THEY ARE PRAYING FOR REBEL SUCCESS.

While the insurgents are just le grees the large number of Dem peratic to ngressition are proguenight and day in the ultimate success of the meaning rebal hen brom an outside on we the world at large a said conclude that there is a steat breaking upin the Republican mainly, is the extent that there will not soon be a complete restoring to party anuty. The time is riper for . complete seventhrow of standpar rsm, and the tactics of the m-Surgent army is not along the ship beaten paths or former religitions. but it is along a lime that blazea new path to great power and is gaining the aplanse of the entire people of America, irrespective of party lines time is true to such an extent that the fight has be come one of universal interest. If we seatch the lustery of Amer ican polities we find there are many precedents for determined insurgents. In an able editorial the gifted Richmond Dispatch

"Every political party since the adoption of the Constitution has had its origin in some such movement. Madison's discontent with Hamilton's extreme policy gave Jefferson his first great ally for his Republican party. Clay's rebellion against the Monroe "Era bellion against the Monroe bessible W. T. KIRKMAN the organization of the Whigs. Sumner's refusal to follow the conservative views of the old Whigs gave the "Black Republicans" their first foothold in Congress. "In the same way historical omens would seem to favor an insurgent movement just at this time. Every such successful effort has grown out of the effort of the majority to enact some especially partisan measure. Hamilton was seeking radical financial legislation when Madison rebelled. Jackson was throttling the bank when the Whigs refused to support him. The Whigs under Clay were struggling with their currency bills when Tyler bolted. Kansas was absorbing the Whigs, in Fillmore's time, when the Northern Whigs made the Republican party: By such precedem the Payne tariff, proposed monetary reforms and ship subsidies should offer the insurgents ample justification

"But the traditions in the ease may not serve. We can wait in expectancy, always remembering the wonderful recuperative powers of the Republican organization and the strength of the party.

Col. Reservelt has just witnessed a from fight. He might f have had a more exciting time if he had been in Washington last
