THE JOURNAL.

A BAD, BAD BOY. "Got any vaseline," said the bad boy to the groceryman, as he went in the store one cold morning, leaving the door open, and picked up a cigar stub that had been thrown down by the stove and began to smoke it.

It is a fact not easily accounted for that, at parties, after supper, the guests begin to grow thin. The strike of the lusters at Montreal has ended as one might have expected. Such strikes do not last.

Mr. Cobb has married Miss Webb. He knew that they were meant to be joined as soon as he could get her. When the momentous question is popped, a girl who answers Yes does so through ignorance. She doesn't No, you know!

It is a business man makes an assignment to the commercial world is all alive to the fact, but judges make assignments every day without creating universal contentment. A WIFE.—Why is it, husband that whenever we send for a pound of tea or coffee to the grocery man he tells us to get it elsewhere? "Oh it's just a trick he has."

A veteran was relating his exploits to a crowd of boys, and mentioned having been in five engagements. "That's nothing," broke in a little fellow, "my sister Sarah's been engaged eleven times."

The ice crop is so abundant everywhere this year that the Kennebec dealers, contemplating their well-stocked houses, are in a quandary as to what to do with it. "There is no speculation in those ice."

Miss Malvina Rumley has just started out with her beau for a walk, when her little brother, Johnny, calls to her from the fence. "Say, Malvina, don't you bring that feller back here to tea with you. Maumma says there ain't worth enough biscuits to go around as it is."

Two fishermen were one day engaged in roasting a house, when one of them lost hold and fell to the ground. The other hastened to him, and inquired, when he found him lying prostrate and still. "Mickey, Mickey, are you dead?" "Mickey, 'no dead, but spachless."

An attorney brought an immense bill to a lady for some business he had done for her. The lady, to whom he had once paid his address, murmured at the charges. "Madam," replied the limb of the law, "I wanted to convince you that my profession is lucrative, and I should not have been a bad match."

SH Down, Robert. Elder Travers, who lately died in Buffalo, old and bent and full of years, was once the most noted man in Eastern New York as a camp-meeting leader. He had a powerful voice and was a fluent speaker, and in the prime of life could get away with any man who ever sought to disturb his meetings.

The elder was once holding a cigar in his mouth, and was observed to be smoking it. "Robert, you had better sit down," observed the elder, as he came forward. "Chicago Bob sits down for no man!" was the reply.

"Sit down, Robert," continued the elder, as he put his hand on the leader's arm. "Here goes to clean out the crowd!" crowed Bob, as he pulled off his coat. Next instant the elder hit under the ear, and as he fell over a bench was followed up and hit again and again, and while in a semi-conscious state, he was carried off by his friends.

Next day he was the first to come forward for prayers. The elder put his hand on his head and said: "Robert, are you in earnest?" "Are you really seeking for faith?" "You bet I am! If faith helps a man to get in his work as quick as you sat yesterday, I am bound to have it, if I have to sell my hat for it."

THE FARM.

Advice to the South.—Hogs and Horses. The cotton factors of St. Louis have united in the following circular in the hope of influencing the growth of food products in the South the coming season: The South is now on the eve of planting another crop, and after an experience of seventeen years it seems advisable that some change should be made in her manner of farming, and we call your careful attention to the following facts, which are offered with the sincere hope that the people will give them proper consideration.

Your section possesses the finest farming lands and the most salubrious climate in the world, and should be to-day financially independent, instead of having to borrow on a crop before it is made, should have her corn-bins and larders filled before commencing a crop. Compare your situation with the farmers of the north and west. They by systematic labor are growing richer each year, while you with patient toil and close economy are neither so thriving nor prosperous as you should be.

There is a cause for these troubles, and we, as cotton men, whose interest is closely identified with yours, believe we are in a position to indicate the way that exists, and offer, without presuming, the following suggestions: 1. The credit system, as at present in vogue throughout the South, is disastrous to the planter and tenants, forcing them to pay extravagant prices for supplies, and causing their crops to be forced into market with such rapidity and in such quantities, as to break prices almost invariably below cost of production.

2. After noting for years the effect of large crops of cotton, we find that the over production of this staple is the key-note to the situation, and we strongly advise all parties interested in the prosperity of the South to discourage the planting of a large acreage this year, and devote their labors first to the raising of grain, cattle and hogs, and give the balance of their time to the culture of cotton.

3. The good results in many ways; for instance, many small farmers, and large ones also, are so heavily in debt when their cotton is ready for sale that they are compelled to sell it at a loss, even though the price is below its intrinsic worth, while, if they had supplies at home, produced, and not bought on credit, they could afford to hold their cotton until they felt justified in selling.

The price of cotton to-day is fully 15 per cent. below the average of the past five years, while, on the other hand, corn is 33 per cent. and provisions 50 per cent. above the average. Thus are you losers both ways.

4. With the production of enough provisions on each farm, cotton need not become a surplus, and soon the incubus of debt would be from your people, and each year would record rapid strides in wealth.

5. Decreased production of cotton, and increased production of bread, meat and other necessities will bring about a more prosperous condition of affairs for the South, and the effect of sheriff sales to satisfy the mortgages that the poor laborers must now give, we would see grinding poverty banished forever, and plenty pour in upon you.

6. They ask their merchants and planters of each State, by calling a convention, or in some practicable manner, agitate this question until the influence is felt throughout the entire cotton belt.

Farming on Credit. Col. Isaac W. Avery, in his Richmond letters from Atlanta to the Augusta Chronicle, has forcibly discussed the borrowing of money to run a farm with. The subject is one of overshadowing importance, and that paper deserves credit for inaugurating the agitation. The system of getting advances from merchants of provisions and fertilizers at time prices has kept the farmer a slave to his factor, especially when the farmer has neglected to raise provisions and give his farm to cotton. Necessity admits of no argument. Men to get a start had to borrow. Exclusive cotton raising keeps farmers starving all the time, and does not relieve their necessity, but rather increases it. As a simple business truth no man, farmer or merchant, can pay high interest as his fundamental expense and make business pay. He will be swamped sooner or later.

The farmer must economize, and raise his provisions. Until he can do these two essential things his farming will not pay. A firm here from the West, Nelson & Barker, have loaned a million dollars to our farmers in five years time, in sums from three hundred dollars to one thousand, and taken mortgages. The farmer pays them down a year's interest of 8 per cent. and the agent's commission of 2 per cent. on the principal. Years ago, in advance, and all costs, etc. It makes about 12 per cent. interest a year. This is a better rate than the 30 or 35 per cent. interest for money on a crop. His money that he borrows will buy supplies and manure at cash prices, making an immense saving. But here is the trouble: He borrows larger amounts, pays out the first year fully 20 per cent. interest in cash, cannot pay his debt in installments but only at the end of five years, and his yearly interest about all he can pay, will not therefore save up annually a portion for the final payment, and when the pay day rolls around he will have to borrow again, or be sold out.

The Northwestern Life Insurance Company, eight or ten years ago, loaned about $100,000 in Georgia on mortgage at 10 per cent. interest. The interest was less than is paid Nelson & Barker. The majority of these loans were collected by foreclosure and sale of the property. It is rather the exception than the rule that the farmer from the South is economically self-denial and raising his own supplies. Make more home-made manure, produce provisions and live hard and dress cheap, until the farm brings money to do better. This is better than debt.
