fame. His immediate command numbered less than 1,000 horsemen, and until the last few miles of the march he checked all as-

out for successful defense by a rear guard. Always narrow-full of sharp descents and sudden curves -natural ambuscades at every mile-it needed only a dozen men at certain spots to hold a regiment at bay for a quarter of an hour. Jackson pushed ahead at a famous rate, and the roar of the guns of the rear guard was ever in his ears. At one point nine dismounted cavalrymen held the narrow road until the Federals had advanced two full regiments, and 100 mea
