SUPERIOR COURT PROCEEDINGS.

Trial of Charles F. Jones for the Murder of his Wife, Tempa S. Jones.

On the 1st of May, 1887, the body of Tempa S. Jones, a white woman, was found in Neuse river, near Maple Cypress. An inquest was held, which resulted in the arrest and imprisonment of her husband, Charles F. Jones. On the first day of the court, at the spring term, 1887, the grand jury returned a true bill of indictment for murder. The trial was held on the 10th of October.

The prisoner, a man about five feet ten inches, dark complexion, jet black hair, eyes blue, nose straight, thin lips and mustache, head of rather an idioc shape, of stout build, weighs probably about one hundred and sixty pounds, and is about twenty-five to thirty years old. He was brought in and seated near his counsel, who during the preliminary arrangements for beginning the trial held close consultations with him.

The special venire being called, Solicitor White called the witnesses for the State and announced his readiness to try the prisoner's counsel after some delay to ascertain if witnesses were present, announced that they were ready to proceed.

The following gentlemen of the regular panel were sworn as jurors: Oliver Westbrock, Wm. Deem, Noah Powell, W. L. Oakley and W. N. Tingle. From the special venire, Redding McPherson, W. H. Fenderson, col., E. E. Tucker, col., S. S. Staten, col., W. H. S. Turner, Samuel Blackledge, col., and F. Bower.

The editor read the bill of indictment, the prisoner standing during the reading.

The following witnesses were sworn for the State: Susan Westbrock, Gerson Westbrock, Pearce Ransom, Mary Hays, Charity Dyer, John Manly, Shade Kirkman, Henry Brown, W. H. Adams, L. W. Smith, Israel Roach, Lafayette Kirkman, Dr. R. G. Cobb.

Court took a recess to one o'clock. At two o'clock the court resumed its session. The testimony was given in a clear and comprehensive manner, and the effort of Jones to prevent her, a scuffle ensued and he may have unintentionally choked her to death. In his efforts to get her to accompany him to his new home, in the heat of the moment, he pushed her from him and rushed madly into the river, to her own destruction. These hypotheses, it was ably contended were more reasonable than that of premeditated murder set up by the prosecution.

The prisoner was remanded to jail. A paper addressed to Judge Shipley for the foreman of the grand jury, setting forth that witnesses and jurors at this time of the court were not receiving the cash for their expenses, was then read by H. H. Bryan, Esq., at request of his Honor.

Mr. Jas. A. Bryan, chairman of the board of county commissioners, explained that the reason of this was that the treasurer of the county had received no funds from the tax collector, the collector having paid them over to the late treasurer. But that arrangements would be made to pay the witnesses and jurors.

The case of State against Guilford Johnson and George Johnson, felony, was taken up by a jury impaneled. W. E. Clarke appearing with the Solicitor and N. J. Moore for the defense. The jury took the case and had not agreed up to the adjournment of the court.

State vs. David Hines, was submitted and judgment suspended upon payment of costs.

State against Petteway. A sub poena was entered, the defendant being in the penitentiary.

State against Bryant, Gaskins, Annis and continuance was asked for.

State against Wm. Johnson & B. G. Gaulty. Three months in the county jail.

The court adjourned to 9 o'clock Friday morning.

FRIDAY'S PROCEEDINGS. At 9 o'clock sharp, Judge Shipley took his seat on the bench. Other Quilley made the proclamation and business begun.

The first before the court was the case of State against Cyrus Westbrock and Dempsey Bell for larceny of one ox or steer, the property of John Henry Jenkins, jr., which was alleged to have been stolen and taken to Kingston for sale. The witnesses were called and all answering. A jury was impaneled. After a long list of witnesses was examined, the case was argued by W. E. Clarke and J. J. Moore for Westbrock, Clement Manly for Bell, and the Solicitor for the State. His Honor charged the jury and the case was given them. After a short retirement the verdict of guilty was rendered.

The jury, in the case of State against Guilford Johnson and George Johnson, rendered a verdict of not guilty.

William Moore, who had plead guilty usual surroundings to which it was subjected. His Honor recalled Pearce Ransom and questioned him in reference to the identity of the boat taken by Jones on the day of the death.

Defence moved that the prisoner be confined to one of the two courts in the indictment, which was not granted by the court, and exceptions taken by defence.

THE ARGUMENT FOR THE DEFENSE. It was opened by H. H. Collector, Esq., in the course of his remarks declared that the whole case rested on circumstantial evidence, and quoted the rules governing such evidence, claiming for the prisoner at the bar the benefit of any reasonable doubt that might be in the minds of the jury. The circumstances and evidence were ably reviewed and an earnest appeal made for the unfortunate prisoner.

Geo. H. White, State's attorney, then opened for the State. He recalled the language of the gentleman who had just addressed the jury, that they had a grave responsibility resting upon them. They must be respected, the jury did not make those laws and were not responsible for them. He reviewed the evidence and stated that the circumstances as detailed before the jury by witnesses made a case of premeditated murder, as charged in the indictment. He joined the evidence together in an ingenious manner and enforced it with a high degree of earnestness.

The argument for the defense was resumed by W. W. Clark, Esq. Mr. Clark opened with the assurance to the jury that what he might say in behalf of the prisoner was not intended to be submitted to them by any one for him, and he felt the responsibility the greater. For himself and the jury he invoked the direction of God Almighty who alone was able to guide them to a correct conclusion. Mr. Clark, with much ingenuity raised the hypotheses of murder in the second degree, or willful drowning by the deceased, who after crossing the river and going up to the untenanted house, had resolved to go no further and returned to the river with the intent of going back to his father's house. The effort of Jones to prevent her, a scuffle ensued and he may have unintentionally choked her to death. In his efforts to get her to accompany him to his new home, in the heat of the moment, he pushed her from him and rushed madly into the river, to her own destruction. These hypotheses, it was ably contended were more reasonable than that of premeditated murder set up by the prosecution.
