EDITORIAL NOTES.

POWER and Dockery have met. Disinfectants "amaze" them. "Hares" No rats, "ghosts" No nothing but fish and bandannas. FARMERS will please remember that cotton packed in anything but fine bagging is unmarketable. WELLS proposes to unite Romania and Roumelia in one nation under the Duke of Cumberland as King. HARRISON intended going to the seashore. He has concluded to go to the mountains, and will try salt water later.

The Florida political campaign is blocked by the yellow fever. Both the candidates for Governor have been quarantined.

We like blooded stock. It is a terrible thing to see an old rascal all knock knees, box ankles, spavined and wind broken. Poor Blaine!

There is more genuine Americanism in one Thurman's declamatory patriotic speeches than in the whole of the Republican cry baby literature.

When last heard from Walker was talking Dockery's temples and telling him "I tried to hold Powell's leg, but blame it, he kicked too hard."

Don't stop to count the votes, but work ahead and make them. The election managers will count them, even will put them on.

My stars, how they flutter strange that such a good single sheet should be such a pot of interest. Wonder if Cleveland's an English breech loader?

When Blaine came to make his fourth campaign speech at Water ville, Me., not a single cheer greeted him. He only spoke fifteen minutes, and then sat down crestfallen and sorrowful.

JOSEPH THURMAN condenses the issues of the campaign into two short sentences. "To stop the surplus the Democrats say cut down the taxes. The Republicans say spend the surplus."

Advices from Europe indicate that there is likely to be such a shortage in the world's supply of wheat as to require a large amount of wheat to be grown in another crop in the United States.

We used to say "three against one ain't fair." Republican Senators now say "one against three ain't fair," and they are right, for Cleveland cleared out the whole shambalg with an Irish shillalah.

A SPANISH Astronomer has discovered that there is rain and snow on the moon. The World suggests that "perhaps Senator Blair, of New Hampshire, will now see his opportunity to push a bill providing the man in the moon with an umbrella and a pair of rubbers."

The Bridgeport Farmer, Rep., says: "The appearance of Blaine at all in the campaign is a blunder; he should have remained in Europe, in which event it might have been possible to persuade the McGumps and the stalwarts that Harrison did not represent Blaine and Blaineism."

It was predicted that the election of Cleveland would produce a financial convulsion; but in the language of the New York World, "a matter of fact, no administration of Federal affairs has been more conservative, safe and successful for the past thirty years than that which President Cleveland has conducted."

Leading journals of the country substantiate the following utterance of the Hartford Times: "Hopes of the Democracy are heard all along the line. From Maine to the Rocky Mountains there are meetings and publications over the President's master stroke. The times are bright, but the American people are not."

MR. FLAINE was never considered an imbecile. What's the matter with him? His late speeches on the President's message have neither strength nor point. Blaine is too young to be in his dotage, but something has thrown him off. It may be the strain of shouldering the Republican campaign; too much for him.

It is the constant effort of our opponents to make out that the Democratic party is in some way opposed to the interests of the workingmen. Think a minute as a matter of fact out of every five hundred Democrats ninety are workingmen. It isn't possible that the Democrats are trying to hurt themselves, is it?—Thurman at Battle Creek.

SEPARATING of Thurman's contented visit to New York, the World says: "Some of the old protectionists who masquerade as Democrats do not like him quite so well since his great speeches in favor of tariff reduction, but the people are with him, and they will welcome him as an invigorating breeze from the prairies. There will be a great flapping of bandannas when Thurman comes to town."

The Wilmington Star says: "We notice in the public prints that there are now three 'silver

MR. SIMMONS' BILL.

To allow importers of cotton bagging a drawback to the full amount of duty on such article the continuous of what is known as the cotton bagging trade.

It is enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be and he is hereby authorized and directed to allow a drawback upon all importations into this country of bagging composed in whole or in part of raw hemp, jute, or any other material, hereafter used in bagging cotton, to the full amount of the duty now or which may hereafter during the operation of this act be imposed by law upon the said article. Provided, however, That whenever the said Secretary shall become satisfied that the agreement, combination, trust or conspiracy existing in this country between certain persons, partnerships, and corporations engaged or interested in the manufacture and production of bagging for bagging cotton, to restrain and control the production and the price of said article, has ceased to exist, he shall report the facts tending to show the abandonment of such agreement, combination, trust, or conspiracy to the President, who, if satisfied that the conclusion of the Secretary is correct, shall issue proclamation declaring that the drawback allowed by this act shall cease at the expiration of thirty days from the date of said proclamation, and said drawback shall cease from that time to be allowed.

Provided further, If at any time after said proclamation said Secretary shall become satisfied of the further existence in this country of an agreement, combination, trust, or conspiracy, as hereinbefore described, between those engaged or interested in the domestic production of the said article, and the President shall allow or disallow such drawback in the manner hereinafter provided, as often as in his judgment it may be necessary to accomplish this purpose.

Sec. 2. That this act shall take effect from and after its ratification.

THE BAGGING QUESTION.

Today we published the bill introduced in the House of Representatives August 29, 1888, by Hon. T. M. Simmons, of North Carolina. The purpose of the bill is to allow importers of cotton bagging to draw back to the full amount of the duty on such article during the continuance of what is known as the cotton bagging trust.

The effect of the bill is to allow importers of cotton bagging to draw back to the full amount of the duty on such article during the continuance of what is known as the cotton bagging trust.
