An alliance between France and Russia is the latest subject of discussion in Europe.

The Louisiana lottery is suffering greatly from the vigorous enforcement of the anti-lottery law.

It appears, from the large number of speaking appointments made, that North Carolina is to be well canvassed for the Democratic party.

THE life of Jefferson Davis, by his widow, is about to be published, and an edition of almost 50,000 copies, it is stated, will be required for the subscribers as the list now stands.

THE first farmers' institute ever held in the State of Virginia, began its session in Henric county on last Thursday. Prof. Massey of North Carolina was one of the speakers.

BISMARCK, it is said, is not a good conversationalist, and is a worse orator. While making a public address he sways himself backwards and forward and twirls his thumbs.

JUDGE E. T. BOYKIN has malaria fever. At the time he was taken sick he was holding court in Raleigh, and the court was adjourned for the term on account of his illness.

BOTH the Governor and the Lieutenant-Governor of Nevada are dead. And the State is nearly so. It lost 13,000 population in the last ten years and now has less than 50,000 people.

ON Monday the President nominated Smith A. Whitfield, of Ohio, to be first assistant Postmaster-General, James L. Hill, of Pennsylvania, to be second assistant Postmaster-General.

ONE postmaster in Georgia is now a firm believer in the saying that a "stitch in time saves nine." There was a hole in the roof of his office, and rain getting through stuck together about $300 worth of stamps.

No period can be more important to the country than that embraced between the present and the meeting of Congress. Our people must demonstrate their manhood and show their conservatism.

PRAYER is the spiritual balsam, the precious cordial, which gives us peace and courage. It recalls to us our pardon and our duty. It says to us: "Thou art loved, loved; thou hast received, give; thou must die, do thy duty, Amiel."

SMALL kindnesses, small courtesies, small considerations, habitually practiced in our social intercourse, give a greater charm to the character than the display of great talents and accomplishments.

DURING the session of Congress about 3000 nominations came before the Senate for approval, only two of which were rejected, those of J. B. Hayes, Collector of Internal Revenue for the 5th district of North Carolina, and G. H. Sirock, postmaster at Selin's Grove, Pa.

A PRESS dispatch, dated Washington, D. C., Sept. 29, says: "Miller (colored)" of South Carolina, introduced in the House, a bill appropriating $250,000 for the erection of a monument in commemoration of the negro Union Soldiers of the war of the rebellion.

A CORRESPONDENT of the State Chronicle, writing from Burlington, Kansas, Sept. 17, says: "After all the talk and scare about the negro exodus to Kansas, the American citizen of African descent is a scarce article here. In Topeka and the large towns you will find them, but in mining towns the negro is not allowed to live."

An election was held in Georgia on the first of Oct., for Governor, State House officers, members of the General Assembly, and two amendments to the State constitution. There was no opposition to the Democratic nominees for State offices; the Legislature will elect a successor to Senator Brown.

We have received through Hon. John T. Patrick invitations and admission tickets to the State Fair at Raleigh. We hope to be there. It promises to eclipse all its predecessors. The Democrats of the State were much revived by attending the Convention of Democratic clubs at Raleigh, and we farmers must go up to the great Fair and renew our strength.

MR. E. C. BEDDINGFIELD, Secretary of the State Alliance, spoke at an Alliance picnic at Danbury Friday saying that he was opposed to any splitting, and during his speech stated several times that he was a Democrat, and could not see how a white man could be a Republican and go home and look his wife square in the face.

PEG-LEG WILLIAMS has begun the movement of the negroes. He is now merely picking up a few "hothers," and will not take away many until November comes. IS all talk about persons, let it be their merits that we hasten to disclose, their good deeds that we gladly unfold. In all discussions on character, let the good come into prominence. In all our uttered hopes for the future, let our highest ideals receive the emphasis. Let truth and not error, light and not darkness, love and not hate, be our themes. So shall we increase and perpetuate all that is good by frank utterance, while evil will decrease and disappear under the thick drapery of silence.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE DEATH PENALTY.

Some months ago we presented some arguments in favor of capital punishment. We have recently been requested by a valued subscriber to present some thoughts on the other side of the question. This we will try to do without committing the JOURNAL for or against the proposition to abolish the death penalty.

The blessed teachings of our holy Christianity are permeating society everywhere, and in the fullness of time all nations will be brought under their benign influence, and love will be the all-conquering power of the universe. The amelioration of man and the glory of God will inspire all thought and command every action.

But the millennium is yet in the distance. We know that when the kingdoms of this world shall have become the kingdoms of our Lord capital punishment will no longer exist. There will be neither sin nor unbelief in the city of our God, in the mountain of His holiness.

Now, it is said "we hang a murderer because we are in the habit of doing so. Again, we condemn him to death for that we do not know, what else to do with him. Again, we sustain the death penalty from a feeling of revenge."

These are motives, not reasons. When we appeal to reason, there is a failure in sustaining the practice. Regarding all human endeavor as fallible, it is not wise to do that which cannot be undone. True, when we subject to a loss of freedom we take part of his life which cannot be restored; but if this has been done unjustly we can in a measure recompense the loss. This is not the case when the unfortunate is deprived of life. Before the death penalty is executed, even while the miserable wretch is counting the hours that carries him towards the fatal moment, there is hope of deliverance. The discovery of the slightest incident may cause a reasonable doubt of his guilt and unbar his prison doors. But the execution ends all. A clear and direct revelation of innocence may come, but it will only bring additional sorrow to bleeding hearts and discredit to the administration of justice.

Capital punishment is approved by many good people because they believe it is of divine appointment and has the sanction of heaven. They read in the sacred word of an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth, and fail to realize that in this they abandon the gospel and fall back upon the theology of the Jews.

Slowly, but steadily we are being influenced by our common sense and better feeling to a departure from the old barbaric treatment of the condemned. Time was when it was considered a dishonor and a defilement to go, for any cause, behind the iron bars of a common prison. But thanks to the example of John Howard and Florence Nightingale—endless thanks to the world's Redeemer—it is all changed. "Then shall He say unto them on His right hand, 'Come ye blessed of My Father, and enter the kingdom prepared for you; for I was hungry and ye fed me; I was naked and ye clothed me; I was sick and in prison and ye visited me.'"

All laws should have for their object the reformation of man and the elevation of society. Time was when it was thought necessary to give full significance to a hanging that it should be public. The judge in condemning the man to death solemnly fixed the day and hour, and the public was invited to witness the brutal spectacle. The people came as to a popular exhibition, and as if the victim on the altar of justice went to his death with any composure he was the hero of the day and the welkin rang with applause. Then again, the gallows has been used as a pulpit from which to speak of the blessedness of the redeemed; and criminals, wreaking with blood, have seemed, to the excited mob, as Elijah translated in chariots of fire. All this is necessarily demoralizing, and he who brings about the abolition of the death penalty will be a public benefactor.

THE Wilmington Messenger says: "While the Radical Juggernaut is grinding and crushing the country the South is forging ahead at a most prosperous rate."

THE third quarter of the year shows 1,114 new enterprises against 771 for the corresponding time last year. That will do."

FEDERAL LEGISLATION.

Another session has ended or is about to end. The record of Federal legislation is made up. How will it appear in the imperishable archives of history?

That Government that does not protect its citizens fails of the object for which it was created and is a reproach among the nations.

Wherein does the legislation of the late Congress fail to meet the just expectations of the people and the ends of justice?

All parties promised in the last presidential canvass to reduce taxation. The Republicans committed themselves to a revision of the tariff as fully as the Democrats did. Can anybody doubt what was understood by reviser? It matters not what party leaders designed, the people were led to believe that there would be a reduction, and when Republican leaders assert that they have kept their promise and revised the tariff they add insult to injury. There is no higher authority in this country than Mr. Carlisle, and he asserts that the tariff bill which has just passed Congress, and is known as the conference bill, increases the tariff from 45 to 60 per cent. Nor is this all. The worst feature of the bill is its sectionalism. Governor Vance, in his great speech at Raleigh, brought this out in these plain and pointed words: "A few days ago, in the Senate, the sectionalism of the Republican party was aptly illustrated. The grain growers of the West paid $10,000,000 a year for binding twine, the tax on which is $2,000,000. A Western Senator moved to put binding twine on the free list. I clapped my hands and said 'hurrah' and I made a speech and tried to take off the tax and relieve the Western farmers. In the South we make 7,000,000 bales of cotton every year, and it costs the farmers $3,000,000 per annum for cotton bagging. I moved to put cotton bagging on the free list. Every unwhipped member of the Republican party, except one, opposed it. The ink wasn't dry on the amendment to exempt binding twine before they were guilty of this mean-ness."

But sectionalism looms up most hideously in the tariff bill. True it has not yet become a law, but it passed the House and its passage in the Senate was only defeated by obstructive tactics on the part of the Democrats.

To every candid mind it must be evident that it is the purpose of the Republican party to prostrate the South. She is shaking the ashes of desolation from her, and will soon appear "bright as the sun, clear as the moon and terrible as an army with banners." This consummation they wish to pervert, and will prevent unless the people rise in their might and hurl them from power.

The Democratic party is at once the potential agent for the defeat of the Republicans and the restoration of the Union in the spirit of the fathers of the Republic.

The Democrats of North Carolina are in line. If there have been meetings of discontent, they have been lost in the thunders of applause that have greeted the great apostle of Democracy throughout the State. At Goldsboro, at Raleigh, wherever he has been, the watch-words of liberty have been rekindled, and victory written in characters of living light, across the skies.

We have yet a paragraph remaining for this column. It is an address to Alliance Democrats. In virtue of your intelligence and patriotism, no less than in your numbers you have a preponderating influence in North Carolina. No man doubts your virtue, no one can question your fidelity to your convictions of right. For some reason, we know not what, Livingston, of Georgia, and Polk, of North Carolina, have appointments to address the people of North Carolina at important places throughout the State. Let nothing tempt you to waver for a moment in your support of the National Democracy and the Democratic party of this grand old commonwealth. Honor your order—for it is worthy of honor—but as you value public liberty and domestic security—the prosperity of the South and the integrity of the Union, stand by the Democratic flag.

THE Goldsboro Argus says: "It is announced that Col. Livingston, President of the Farmers' Alliance of Georgia, and Col. L. L. Polk, President of the National Alliance, will speak in this city, on Thursday of next week, Oct. 21. The people are cordially invited to hear them."

THE Democrat says: "The best educated editor in this State is Robert Hayden, of the Charlotte Chronicle, who is paid for his services by the stockholders of that paper $2,000 a year."

A WRECK Off Lookout. BEAUFORT, N. C., Oct. 7.—Stoneman Glenhart, from Pensacola, Fla., lost with lumber, bound for Antwerp, was wrecked by Mr. W. C. Stronach, of twenty men crew of twenty men saved.

Author of the Force Bill—Hon. Henry L. VLYNN, Mass. October 1.—Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge was re-nominated for Congress by the Sixth District Republicans this afternoon. Mr. Lodge was presented to the convention and accepted the nomination in a speech of some length.

A Preposterous Story. PAIRS, Oct. 2.—Madame Bennett, the woman arrested at Cannes on suspicion of being a German spy, and in whose possession was found a plan of defense of that place, has confessed that she was in the employ of the German Embassy at Paris. She is a remarkable well preserved woman, and really looks ten or fifteen years younger than she really is.

TOWN AND COUNTRY.

"God made the country, and man makes the towns." The words we have quoted are, in a sense, true but they may be construed so as to be misleading.

It is so arranged, in the divine economy, that man is a co-laborer with God in His physical and moral universe. Even in the plan of redemption, man is an honored instrument in winning souls from earth to heaven.

The country is the realm of fields, orchards and meadows. God made the soil in His chemical laboratory. He sends the early and the latter rain to make the earth bring forth abundantly, and the sunshine to mature the grain, the fruit and the grass. But left alone to these influences no golden grain, luscious fruits or sweetly scented new mown hay would make glad the heart of the husbandman.

Man must do his part. The ground must be broken up; the seeds planted; the soil tilled, and the crops gathered. God and man, nature and art, combined in holy creation for the good of His creatures.

But to thought that inspired us when we first touched this page with our pencil was the relation that town and country sustain to each other. The idea that there is a natural antagonism between country and town cannot be sustained neither by the logic of the schools nor the sterner logic of facts. They are parts of the same body. The hands cannot say to the feet "we have no need of thee," neither can the feet say to the hands, "we are independent of you." Upon the faithful performance of the functions of all its members depends the health of the body.

That part of the country possesses the highest value that is contiguous to town. The nearness to market, the number of persons near at hand in need of country products—these are some of the reasons why lands in the vicinity of towns are more valuable than those more remote.

The advantages are not on the side of either country or town. Benefits are mutual, and courtesies and favors should be, and usually are, reciprocal.

The town must draw its supplies from the country, and that town is a long ways from the highways of progress that does not offer inducements to the surrounding country to bring in its produce and exchange it for merchandise.

There is no greater fallacy than that which assumes a necessary antagonism between the different vocations in life. One farmer may come in competition with another farmer, but there can be no competition between a merchant and a farmer. They are mutually dependent on each other, and the prosperity of one is a benefit to the other. If all were farmers there would be no market for farm products; if all were merchants, their goods would rot on their shelves. It is the mutual dependence of man on his fellow-man that constitutes the bulwark of society.

A Soldiers Home Purchased. RALEIGH, Oct. 1.—Last July it was thought that arrangements for the purchase of a site for a Confederate soldiers home here were complete, but there was some hitch. Today the grounds known as Camp Russell, for years used as a camp by regular troops, were purchased by Mr. W. C. Stronach, of the executive committee of the State Veterans Association. There are already a number of buildings and the work of erecting a home is begun. In a few weeks several veterans, who are now being cared for here by the executive committee, will be quartered in the home and in a short time twenty-seven soldiers, now in various poor hospitals, will be transferred to the new home.

Expulsion of an Atricious Firm. HAYESVILLE, N. C., Oct. 7.—The brothers, Joe and Carmelo Diaz, were executed in this city yesterday for a particularly heinous crime. They had murdered a woman near Pinar Del Rio and subjected her to the grossest indignities. They were arrested and held in the city until yesterday noon, awaiting her removal to the State Prison. They were then executed by the State.
