Typhoid Fever.

The fact that nearly twice as many counties reported typhoid fever this month as did last suggests the advisability of calling attention again to the importance on the part of both physicians and householders of care fully looking after the means of pre venting its spread. When it is remembered that 50,000 people die annually in the United States from this disease, of which North Carolima's quota would be about 1,000, to say nothing of constitutions shatexcuse for repeatedly directing the attention of both the profession and the people to their duty in relation thereto is necessary.
