Checking Up.

After the prescription is carefully studied, after all the ingredients have been placed in your bottle—then we "check up," carefully review the quantities we have weighed and measured, and examine all the boxes or bottles from which drugs have been taken, to see that no mistake has been made.

We do this with all prescriptions, and take time to do it thoroughly.

IMPORTANT DECISION.

Judge Simonton Files Decree in Tucker's Suit.

The Suit Against Governor, Attorney General, President A. & N. C. R. R. and Others. Legislative Act of February Construed by Judge.

Special to Journal.

RALEIGH, N. C., October 6. Judge Simonton today filed decree here in suit by private stockholder William E. Tucker against Governor Russell, Attorney General Walser, the Board of Public Improvement, and the President and State Directors of the Atlantic and North Carolina Railway.

The Judge dismisses the complaint as to the Governor, Attorney General and Board Public Improvements, and dissolves temporarily the restraining order which he granted Col. Tucker so far as it enjoins the Governor from the legislative act of February 23rd last which required the Governor to restore the possession of the road, and the duty to appoint a receiver.

But the Judge makes the temporary restraining order permanent so far as it enjoins enforcement by the railway company of the act of the February to amend the charter, but the Governor is to remain free to appoint a State proxy.

The order prohibits the carrying out of that part of the act of the Secretary repealing section 1st of the charter and amendatories, and the provision requiring the State proxy's presence necessary for constituting a quorum at a meeting of all the stockholders for all forwards, and declares it to be void. The remainder is adopted and is a part of all proceedings in the matter.

The Governor, Attorney General and State Board of Improvement are relieved from suit of Tucker, and he is required to pay costs from the road.

COTTON.

Macy and Pendleton, 15 Broadway, New York, on the Situation.

NEW YORK, October 6th.

Sales 10,000 bales including about 4,000 better lots here to the trade. Liverpool exports last week 40,000 bales, showing a decrease in the total exports of 1,000 bales. The Liverpool Times says: "The Egyptian crop is generally acknowledged to be over." The Egyptian Press says: "The yellow fever has assumed such alarming proportions that it is impossible to have large influx of cotton this season." Southern advices: Merchants are selling cotton goods very freely and are out of stock. Some of the manufacturers never were, but not as much as in the future. The spinners and operatives are now having from five to six days time during the season of active demand. The crop is not to be ginned as fast as it is picked. We look to see this demand increase and the bears who have thus far had the best of it will be compelled to cover. There is a strong feeling that the supply is not adequate to the demand, and that the bears will not be able long to hold their own. The market has assumed itself in such a position that we cannot recommend purchases to anticipate the situation.

The Manchester correspondent of the "Chronicle" writes the market is dull. The outlook for cotton goods and yarns of March shipment is very poor. The Lancashire and Yorkshire markets generally. Both these districts report a decrease of American and Indian imports for the month, holding the market of the Continental Western world with Europe and Indian imports for the month. The Lancashire will try to use as much as possible of their own cotton. The Liverpool stock of American cotton is now practically all of the new crop. The Liverpool stock of American cotton is not much heavier than that of one year ago.

Six men have probably lost their lives as the result of an attempt to cross up the 1,050 miles of the Yukon, which in some places runs down at the rate of 8 miles an hour. The men, two of whom are named Abercrombie and Tate, were last seen drifting out of the mouth of the Yukon to sea. The occupants of a sail boat started up the river from St. Michaels last week and have not been seen since. Their names are McClowes, Roberts and Schultz.

CRISIS FOR TAMMANY

Prospect of a Split. Sheehan Protests. Henry George Does Some Talking.

New York, October 5. A grave crisis has developed in the affairs of Tammany Hall. Leader Richard Croker and Senator Hill's lieutenant, David B. Hill, have had a falling out. Mr. Croker is in the position of the commander of an army who is confronted by the fact that his own lieutenants are in open revolt against him. Mr. Croker is today in the city, but he is not at Tammany Hall. This morning expressed the opinion that the Jack Cowell ticket would have to be changed.

One of them, the editor of Congressional predicted that Henry George would poll 100,000 votes if Van Wyck could not be induced to leave the field. Others said that even if George did not poll so many votes he would draw so heavily from Tammany as to endanger the success of the Democratic city ticket.

Henry George the afternoon talked freely about his campaign. Among other things he said: "I am not altogether for free silver or for the gold standard either. I am instead a good tucker. I am anything else. All the friends of Brennan with me in the fight, Jerry Simpson and others have offered their services in the fight. I believe in returning to the doctrines of Thomas Jefferson. The silver question is a mere incident, and I stand for the great principles back of the Chicago platform."

Deserting Tammany

New York, October 6. Seventeen Republican and Democratic leaders, many of them well known in Tammany Hall, met at the office of Commissioner Bernard J. Brown, a well known member of Congress. Colonel Brown's office attracted considerable attention during the day, as it was known that the meeting was to be held there. Those who attended the meeting refused to talk about it, but it is known that the object of the meeting was to consider the advisability of deserting Tammany Hall and supporting Seth Low for Mayor. Among those present were Colonel Brown, Congressman Cummings, Congressman Fitzgerald, Congressman Ryan, Congressman Sulzer, Congressman Goldfogle, Congressman Bennett, Congressman Ray, Congressman Dalzell, Congressman Howell, Congressman Lamb, Congressman Ryan, Congressman Sulzer, Congressman Goldfogle, Congressman Bennett, Congressman Ray, Congressman Dalzell, Congressman Howell, Congressman Lamb.

RULES TAMMANY.

Contest with Sheehan Ends in Croker's Victory.

At an Executive Meeting the Differences Between the Leaders Discussed. Must all go to Work. Croker Heads the Organization.

New York, October 5. Richard Croker went to Tammany Hall this afternoon and again demonstrated his absolute power in that organization. Mr. Sheehan first spoke a little piece of submission and then retired to a corner, where he was scarcely noticed by the crowd that fawned about Mr. Croker.

Mr. Sheehan's face was gloomy. Not the faintest shadow of a smile crossed it.

A meeting of the executive committee of Tammany was called for 4 p. m. The continued reports of differences between Croker and Sheehan and the almost open defiance of many of the small leaders led Mr. Croker to enter the wigwam again and bring the malcontents back into line. At 3:45 there was growling and muttering in the hall. Two hundred men had assembled there and all were talking of prospective break between Croker and Sheehan.

A minute later the word was passed quickly along: "He's coming." There was a rush to the doors. John C. Sheehan did not go to the door. He sat at the desk in the back office, apparently busy with papers. Up the steps of the hall marched Croker. The first hand stretched out to grasp his was that of Lawrence Delmont, and the next George B. McClellan's. Quickly Mr. Croker brushed through the lobby, and without looking to right or left, entered the committee room. After a time Sheehan entered the committee room. He did not look around for Croker, nor rush over to greet him. He spoke to a few men as he walked along, and finally passed within a few feet of the renowned king to speak to a man beyond.

There was no applause, but a murmur went around the room. Mr. Croker's face was cold and impassive as he arose from his chair. He did not look at Sheehan, who had gone back to his seat.

Croker then made a telling speech that convinced his hearers of his side of the question and urged them to go into the campaign with confidence and there would be no doubt of the result.

This speech convinced those who heard him that Mr. Croker was still the head and soul of the organization.

WILL STICK TO BUSINESS.

The President will Stay in Washington. The Yantic for the Lakes. White House Brushed up.

WASHINGTON, October 5. The President does not contemplate accepting any invitations between now and the time Congress assembles that will involve his absence from the city, and expects soon to turn his attention to the annual message, which he hopes to have completed by Thanksgiving Day. The cabinet meeting today was largely devoted to the forthcoming annual reports of the several heads of departments, which serve as a guide to the President in making recommendations to Congress relating to the various offices.

Secretary Long today issued orders for the transfer of the Yantic, now at the Boston navy yard, to the Michigan reserves, in charge of a crew of forty men, two naval officers and two officers of the State reserve. The vessel will be in readiness to make the sea journey to the St. Lawrence by October 15, and on entering the river will proceed slowly until Quebec is reached. At Quebec the reserves will take charge of the vessel and conduct her through the canal to Detroit.

The White House has this week taken on its winter apparel. A deep green carpet, with gold colored harps, has displaced the well worn covering of yesterday, and the down stairs heavy curtains and hangings have taken the place of light summer effects. The mansion is now practically in readiness for the season and the President and Mrs. McKinley have settled down for the winter.

Dense fog in Norfolk harbor resulted in several collisions and one fatality.

After a discussion which continued several days, the Chamber of Deputies of Peru adopted the gold standard by a majority of one vote.

That the authorities are anxious to put the navy on an emergency footing is shown by the intention of Secretary Long to submit an estimate to Congress for $1,500,000 to be used for purchasing ammunition in the next fiscal year.

Cotton.

NEW YORK, October 6. Sales of cotton in Liverpool and here were at advanced prices and much better than pessimistic all-cotton circles. The bulls are not asserting themselves very much, but the bears are gradually covering with greater freedom, and the market creeps upward from day to day on the increase of exports and partial revival of confidence among consumers. Secretary Hester of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange says the average weight of cotton marketed up to September 30th was 472.76 pounds against 512.13 pounds last year corresponding time. THE CENTEMERI KID GLOVES.

Formerly Known as the Centemeri Gloves.	Now Known as the Maggioni Gloves.

The maker of the gloves known as "The Centemeri Gloves" that won favor at the Centennial Exposition in 1876 is and always has been, Maggioni Francesco, of Milan, Italy.

P. Centemeri & Co. never were the makers of these gloves, but simply controlled the sale in the United States with the right to sell the gloves under the brand, P. Centemeri & Co. until 1888 when their contract with Maggioni expired.

I quote the Dry Goods Economist:

"The Maggioni Francesco Gloves which for about fourteen consecutive years, up to 1888, had been imported by the Messrs. P. Centemeri & Co. as the "Centemeri Gloves" are very well known, have stood the test of years, and are considered standard in the American markets. Messrs. P. Centemeri & Co. whose contract with Maggioni of Milan expired in 1888, have no longer the gloves of that make for sale."

I take pleasure in notifying the ladies of New Berne that I am exclusive agent in New Berne of the "Maggioni Gloves" formerly known as the "Centemeri Gloves."

The above explanation is due to the well earned laurels of these celebrated gloves. I have just opened my new fall line of these Superior Gloves and request your inspection.
