As the National Democratic party is aituated, it would seem that its directors were satisfied with Mr. W. J. Bryan, and certainly this gen tlemaa is being kept prominently before the people, and every Democratic organ penalsts in naming him as the party's nominee in 1960.

Between Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Bryan, it would seem that the issue of silver would again be the daviding line between the two, for both are against expansion and territorial acquisition of any kind.

Mr. Bryan's position is pretty wellestablished on party policies, as muc been Mr. Cleveland's, but the New York dinner may develop something new and perhaps suggest to many Democrats that the Democratic party needs a Moses, and remembering Mr. Cleveland's former successes, the National Democratic Nominating Convention may prove an exciting place, where Democracy, may present several candidates, and be able to make a platform for the party, not merely to get into office on, but one upon which the party can all assemble, and be united in every way.
