The value to the merchants of a community, and to the increased prosperity of a town, which tobacco brings, needs no special showing, it is illustrated in the development seen in those places which have established tobacco ware houses and local markets for the trade ville with only 200 votes would have

EASTERN CAROLINA AND PAS-SENGER TRAVELING.

The four hundred and eighty miles, from extreme east to west of North Carolina, are enough to make the almost two distinct classes of people which live in the two sections of the State

From the climatic influence of the Atlantic ocean, with the proximity of the Gulf Stream, on the East, to the lofty Blue Ridge mountains with altitudes ranging above six thousand feet, there can be no surprise that the Old North State produces peoples with tastes. habits and surroundings so greatly at

Nor is it any wonder that even in political campaigns, the people of Eastern Carolina and the people of Western Carolina are hard to get into that perfect "community sympathy," for they can not fully understand the peculiar environments which govern the people

And in this isolation of the two see tions, that great and important factor which brings into complete union the people of every other Southern State, the railroads, do not act in North Caroline as the tie which should bind and keep in perfect touch the people of this

The peculiar isolation of the people east of the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad, is especially noticeable.

The people of Charleston, S. C. can go to Columbia, the capital and return sale Druggists, Toledo, O. the same day. From Savannah to Af-lanta, in Georgia, travel is equally as easy. SAME OLD POLITICAL RAZZLE DAZZLE.

The Democratic political convention in Kentucky which was recently held for the purpose of nominating a candi-Entered at the Postoffice, New Bern date for Governor, has provoked the usual amount of criticism and a number of wild predictious.

In summing up the convention the Louisville Courier Journal, says;

"As far as intelligent people knew, o have seen, there was little choice be tween the various rival candidates be youd that of personal favor or disfavor Each of them started out to declare himself first and foremost a radical Bryan, free silver Democrat at the ratio cussion. Having sworn this, and, if pos sible, proved it, each proceeded in his own way to press his claims and to push his fortune, in no case allowing any The increasing business done by the question about regularity to put the tobacco warehouses each year, with the slightest limitation upon his right to knock down and drag out as many votes as his money would buy, or, in default of money, as he might be able to lay his hands upon."

> And of the Convention's nominee Goebel, a western newspaper says.

political manipulation. He is cold and calculating, and in a party crisis or emergency he is just the man to find a way out. Any other man going to Louis recognized the fact that the people would have none of him, and would have thrown up the sponge. But the author of the Kentucky force bill is not that sort. It is a matter of indifference to him whether the people want him or not provided he attains his end. When he was a member of the Kentucky Senate, he gained some distinction as a manipu lator, but there was nothing in his career to his personal credit. His force bill fully as indefensible in its way as the shown and even those who may not Lodge bill, is a chicken that will yet come home to roost. It has done more to pave the way for a national force bill than all the scheming of Lodge and Reed and Davenport could accomplish

> Now what does all this fierce explosive writing amount to, any way?

Or who really cares outside of the defeated candidates in Kentucky, whether Goebel is a "political Ingo," a wire puller, or that he secured the gubernatorial nomination through questionable

The fact is that the Kentucky convention was very like all Conventions, per haps it showed more fighting than usual, but it should not be forgotten that the Goebel outfit represents a new political faction which has secured control of the 'machine," and proposes to run it for

Naturally the advent of a new leader will create a "hot political convention," but what there was in the Kentucky convention, specially, to mark it so pe coliarly different from all others, the dispassionate and unemotional person will not be able to decide, and any disinterested party will readfly declare that except in degree, the Kentucky convention only showed the same old political razzle dazzle that previous conventions exhibited, and future political conventions will probably act in the same way.
