Fox's Wit.

The following is one of the many stories told about Charles James Fox, the English statesman and orator:

Mr. Hare, envoy to the court of Po land, occupied rooms in the statesman's "diggings." He was a great personal friend and indeed a man of very similar tastes. They were each the objects of continual inquiry on the part of tradesmen and others. One day Fox, looking out of the upper window descried two men watching the house and waiting. With a genial smile, he shouted, "Pray, gentlemen, will you tell me, are you Fox bunting or Hare bunting today?"

The bailiffs were so tickled that they

The presentation of the above opera last night at the Masonic Opera House was witnessed by an audience that tested the scating capacity of the house on the main floor and gallery.

It was a critical audience, and its hearty reception of the Jules Grau Opera Company, showed that the opera was well sung and well acted.

It is not necessary to go into explanation of El Capitan, for its musical numbers and comical situations are familiar to all theatre goers.

Last night's audience showed its appreciation of the solos and choruses, by demanding several recalls of the more popular songs, to which the singers very

A blinding beam of electric light, thirteen inches wide, is a new warning to ships off the dangerous shoals of Cape Hatterss. Dismond shoal lightship, No. 71, has been fitted with a 3,000 candle power searchlight, the first of its kind ever placed at sea as a mariner's beacon, and it is expected to be visible forty miles, twenty-two miles farther than the regular beacon lights of the lightships can be seen. The chief element in the effectiveness of the new light is found in the fact, that the lightship never being at rest, the beam of light will sway in varying angle and always be distinguishable. How the Cobra Gives Warning, The most dangerous reptiles of India and Africa are the cobras. No snakes, not even rattlesnakes, are more dread ed, and with reason. As the rattlesnake warns the ear by its significant "rattle," so the cobras warn the eye by the mode in which they expand the upper part of the body when irritated. This expansion is produced by a sudden movement of the ribs of that region of the body. Usually they incline backward, but the animal when irritated makes them stand out at right an-gles to the body and so, of course, forces outward the skin which covers them. Thus the neck, or part just be hind the bead, becomes greatly ex-panded and flattened, as it also does, though in a less degree, in the Austra-lian blacksnake. This expansion is called a bood, and so the animals are called hooded snakes. In some of them there is on the back of the bood a dark mark something like a pair of spectacles, and they have therefore been called specta le suekes.
