He Got His Tip.

He was a tiny little fellow, surely not more than five years old, and as he called for his afternoon papers at the corner of Twelfth and Market streets many people gazed at him with mingle amusement and pity. He had long brown curls, wet with the drenching rain, and his shrill little voice had a baby lisp. A very stout, elderly woman, apparently weighing close to 200 pounds, paused at the south side of Market street and looked askance at the miniature river of water and at the passing procession of wagons and trolley cars.

The little newsboy was quick to size up the situation. Running up to her, he exclaimed: "Don't be afraid, lady. I'll help you across." Reaching up his tiny little hand, he clutched her by the arm, and together the ridiculous pair threaded their way to the opposite curb. Then the stout woman opened her purse, gravely handed the little fellow a coin being overhauled, among these the and disappeared into the Reading ter-

"THE SCOTCH RESULT."

Seeing the Point of the Joke In Plain Story. William Inglis was a visitor at a cotch yacht club on the Clyde during a regutta week, and one night he was called on for a story. Knowing, he says, from books and experience the density of Scotchmen to American jokes, he told the broadest, most pointed story he could think of. It was the old chestnut of the inebriated Irishman

"Three o'clock," said the policeman. "Ol didn't hear," said the Irishman.
"Three o'clock!" the cop yelled.

who met a policeman and asked him

"Shure, Ol didn't hear that, either." The cop then hit him three whacks on the head with his club. "Did you hear that?" he asked.

"Shure," said Pat, "OI heard that, and Ol do be fur thinkin' it's glad Oi am that Ol didn't mate ye at twilve." There was not a ripple of appreciation on the rows of Scotch faces before him, said Mr. Inglis. They, one and all, were blank, and slowly each Scotchman drained his whisky to hide the fact.

"Suddenly," said Mr.- Inglis, "I saw ted, although not for long, because in a break into a smile. Slowly he removed an old Scotchman in the far corner his pipe from his mouth and blew out a cloud of smoke. 'Hoot, mon,' he said, but ye canna blame the policemon, for a' that. It do be a wee bit hard to be asked the same question three times." "That is what I call the Scotch result," Mr. Inglis concluded.-New York

> Where Dinners Cost Five Cents. A large proportion of the population of Naples live at public kitchens or cooking stands, which are found on every block in the densely settled portions of the town. They are generally dingy little rooms, the walls blackened with the grease and smoke of generations. In the rear is an old fashioned fireplace with a number of pots and kettles, from which savory steam arises. The largest is always for macaroni, for that is the staff of life. The others contain soup and various kinds of fish and vegetables, while on the counter, which usually projects into the street, the cooked food is spread out in large pans and bowls. The customers come along with pans and buckets, look over the stock and make their selection.

> The prices are remarkably low. Fish, vegetables, fruit and macaroni, the chief articles of Neapolitan diet, are cheaper here, it is said, than in any other place in the world, and at one of these cooking shops a good dinner can be obtained for 2 cents and enough for a family for 5 cents.-Chicago Record-Herald.
