THE TENANTRY SYSTEM.

The Northern man traveling through the South often asks why so many farms reach the diseased portion of the ear show so little the appearance of care There is only one way to cure desines and improvement. It is largely the re- and that is by con and that is by constitutional remedies. Suit of the system of tenantry generally ovalling throughout that section. Under the tenant system, many South-ern farms have deteriorated in produc-tive capacity and in general improve-ments, during the past years. The ordi-nary tenant of the South knows little of rotation or deversification of crops, and rotation or deversification of crops, and is satisfied to tend the land he hires in Catarrh, which is mothing obst an inthe same crop from year to year, usually cotton with a little corn. He does not often improve, and when improvement are given him, no care is taken of them so that under his regime, farms take on a most uninviting appearance.

To the Southern owner, however, the tenant system has attractions, in that it allows him the most perfect freedom from care and responsibility in the managem at of his property. Under the tenai : system farm lands pay a fairly in the property to pay a fairly to p good rental, and with the recent pro-
