THE "ELEVATOR FACE."

Doctor Tillain Inviconment May Produce New Human Species. Now it is the "levator face." It is characterized by a strained effort to look two ways at once. It has been noticed for some time, but has become more commen since the Frick, Arrott and other very tall buildings have been erected. It is the product of the desire to carch the first elevator passing the floor. Those who try it know this requires close watch on both sides at once, says the Pittsburg Gazette.

The higher and larger the skyscrapers the greater the number of clevators required. In fact, the ultimate beight of office buildings will be measured by the inability to give elevator service on account of the space occupied by them. But to return to the "clevator face." A physician who believes in the Darwinian theory and attributes odd development to environment declared the other day that modern civilization is working toward a new type of the human animal.

"This straining to see on both sides at once," said he, "will cause the eyes to grow farther apart. It is not merewatching for elevators that calls for double vision at a wide angle. Crossing congested streets and looking for trolley cars and automobiles in both directions require the same kind of skill. In time the eyes will become independent of each other and placed well to the side of the forehead. Then the owner can cover as wide a field as the turret guns on one of our new war ships. This will allow him to watch for all the elevators at once or to see vehicles approaching from all directions. No doubt there will be other changes in the face. The features may grow sharp and peaked from the state of continual watchfulness, while the ears may be abnormal in size and have great delicacy in sense in order to catch the faintest rattle of the big chain on the elevators or the soft tread of the pneumatic tired auto. The whole expression will be one of great inten-

HINTS FOR FARMERS

Pigs and silk. The question often arises, Would it not be more profitable to buy pigs than to raise them? It would be decidedly an advantage if the supply could be filled with any kind of certainty and of a quality that would give full compensation for labor and feed and the risk of buying infectious disases could be eliminated. Is it not true that whoever engages in animal husbandry should become a master eventually both as breeder and feeder? If it is essential to select a good dairy cow and sire, it is no less important to select good breeding sows of robust constitution, rustlers at the feeding trough, prolific, docile '(most jof this last depends on ourselves in humane treatment), a good mother and milker, for like will produce like to a greater or less degree. But we are the modelers of improvement, and when we develop points by our own management we have a better guarantee that we can perpetuate them. There must be of ecessity a system of breeding that will insure a supply of pigs of nearly the same age for the different seasons in order to have advantage of feeding the byproducts to the young growing There should be also proper pigs. shelter for feeding and breeding, so as to reduce labor, enhance comfort and insure full compensation for food consumed We of the northwest ever and anon encounter zero weather and once in awhile 40 degrees below. Willow Growing. One of the nicest little side issues possible to a farmer who has a small stream running through his place is willow growing. There is a constant and if anything increasing demand for basket willows, and in many locations the bushes can be grown with little or no expense or trouble. Men who have gone into it, however, on a very small scale as a trial have generally found it so profitable that they have devoted some thought to its details and have become extensive willow producers.

The department of agriculture some years ago published a short pamphlet describing the best methods of raising willows and the conditions under which they produce the highest priced reeds. Willows will grow readily wherever the ground is at all moist. Where a man has a small flat which it would be possible for him to overflow by the construction of a cheap or temporary earth dam, requiring perhaps a day's labor with his team, it might pay him to look into the willow production business a little and see if he cannot create an additional industry for the farm without interfering with the other work. The juvenile members of some farmers' families like to try their hand at making willow ware during the winter evenings.-Guy E. Mitchell in American Cultivator.

Storing Apples.

Apples should be stored in a cool, dry place, says C. B. Barrett. Warmth and moisture cause fermentation and decay. If possible, separate the overripe ones from those gathered before the ripening process was completed solid, unripened apples keep much longer than those which have been alowed to remain on the tree until fully ripe. But while the keeping quality of the unripened ones is desirable, the flavor is nevertheless impaired by gathering when in the best condition for long keeping. If the temperature of the cellar or house is kept even and at the right degree, there is little danger of losing even the ripest of the winter varieties until the early spring months. It would be a good plan to have some of the latest keepers that have been gathered and stored before becoming too ripe reserved for use before the early crop comes.

The Hay Press.

The farmer who has more hay than barn room will find it a good investment to have a hay press, that he may put it into smaller bulk, so that there will be room for it in the barn instead of stacking it out of doors. It will keep better, and if he has any to sell it will be more easily handled and sell more readily at a better price. If one cannot afford to buy a press, let those in a neighborhood who are likely to want to use it unite in owning one. The hay may be stacked until the cutting and curing is over with if one does not wish to run the press in haying time, but the quicker the stack is reduced to bales the better.

Farmers Won. An interesting suit was recently settied in the Maryland courts sustaining the pure fertilizer law. Then he took her to the furniture stores, and they selected carpets, beds, chairs and other things that were necessary to make them comfortable, and he paid for them, after which he went about his own affairs rejoicing.

A BANK STORY.

Incident That Startled the 014 Lady of Threadneedle Street.

Some years ago the directors of the Bank of England were startled to receive an invitation to meet an unknown man in the strongroom of the bank at midnight. "You think you is all safe hand you bank his safe, but I knows better. I bin hinside the bank the last 2 nite hand you nose nuffin about it. But I am nott a theaf so hif yer will mett mee in the great squar room, with all the monelys, at twelf 2 nite. He explain orl to you, let only ther 2 cum down, and say nuffin to nobody." The strongroom was guarded the next night in spite of a disposition to regard the letter as a hoax by police and-nothing happened. The next phase of the mystery was more astonishing than ever. A heavy chest of papers and securities taken from the strongroom arrived at the bank, with a letter complaining that the directors had set the police upon the writer, and that he had therefore not appeared as he promised, but to prove that he was neither a thief nor a fool he sent a chest of papers he had taken from the bank. Let a few gen tlemen be alone in the room, and he would join them at midnight, said the writer, and to cut short a long and strange chapter of bank history, a man with a dark lantern burst into the strongroom of the bank at midnight after calling from behind the stone walls for the directors to put out the lights. He was one of a strange class of men who gained a living by searching the sewers at night, and through an opening from a sewer he had found his way into the richest room in the world.—St. James Gazette.

"Address as Above."

There is one lawyer in Brooklyn who will never again make use of Latin phrases in writing business letters. A short time ago he had to write a letter to a client in a neighboring city regarding an important lawsuit that was to come up before the court in the course of a few days. The information he solicited was highly essential to his case. In writing this epistic be made use of a letter head with his printed address at the top. In closing his letter he signed himself thus, "John Langdon, address ut supra,"

After waiting several days for the reply, which did not come, be again wrote his procrastinating client and asked why he had not sooner answered his first letter. The next day he received a reply in which the client said that he had answered the letter and addressed it to "John Langdon, Ut Supra, N. Y."
