Henry Blount's Entertainment.

Mr. Henry Blount of Wilson, well known in this State as an eloquent, humorous and brilliant lecturer, entertained an audience at the Court house Rip Van Winkle and a humorous comedy called "Solon Shingles". Mr, Blount a rejoinder, as he spoke on issues not impersonated all of the characters in both of the selections. His elecution was masterly and his conception of the sifferent characters reminded his audience of the famous Jefferson, who is supposed by many to be only great Rip Van Winkle. This oldstory, so full of pathos and so full of the weakness of human nature, was beautifully rendered by Mr. Blount. As a comedian he is worthy to be placed among the best. A lady in the audience remarked:-"He is wonderfully clever and his performance is charming."

We hope to see Mr. Blount in New Bern again ere long. He is very much attached to the people of New Bern and delights to come here, but he has not always received from the New Bern public that consideration to which his talents entitle him.

MAJOR GRAHAM DAVES.

North Carolinian Known And Respected of All. Burial Today. Sketch of His Life.

Entered into rest, on Monday ct. 27, 1902, at Asheville, N. C., Major Graham Daves, in the 67th year of his age. "Numbered with Thy Saints in glory everlasting."
The funeral will be from Christ Church, at 4 p. m. to-

The following from the News-Observer will tell the facts of Major Daves

"This estimable gentleman was in his sixty-seventh year, having been born on the 16th of July, 1836, in New Bern, of which town his father and grandfather both were residents. He was the son of John Pugh Daves, whose father, Captain John Dayes, was a noted officer of the Continental Line during the Revolution, fighting in many battles under Washington and severely wounded in the desperate assault on Stony Point by General Wayne. Though he at times was a resident of other localities, nearly the entire life of Major Graham Daves was spent in his native town. His early education was received at the New Bern Academy; and, in 1851, he became a cadet in the Maryland Military Academy at Oxford, Md. Leaving the latter institution in 1853, he entered Trinity College at Bartford, Conu., and graduated therefrom in 1857. After leaving college he spent some time in the study of law under Chief Justice Pearson, and became private secretary to Governor Ellis on January 1, 1859. In this position be remained until the death of Governor Ellis (who was his brother-in-law) on July 7, 1861. In the meantime (May 20, 1861), North Carolina had repealed the ordinance of 1780 whereby she entered the Federal Union and had cast her fortunes with the Southern Confederacy. Lincoln had called for troops to coerce the South, and Mr. Daves was not slow to join the defenders of his home There is every indication that a full State. He entered the service of the Confederacy in July, 1861; and, on the 24th of that month, became Adjutant of the Twelfth North Carolina Volunteers, under Colonel J. Johnston Pettigrew sion and was killed, at Falling Waters, The Twelfth Volunteers afterwards became the Twenty-second regiment of North Carolina Troops, with which Adjutant Daves served in North Carolina and Virginia until April, 1862, when he was commissioned Assistant Adjutant General, with the rank of Captain, on the staff of General S. G. French, who was then stationed at Wilmington. In July, 1862, Captain Daves was promoted to the rank of Major and ordered to Virginia where he saw active service around Petersburg and elsewhere. In the summer of 1863, he was sent to Mississippi where he became Assistant Adjutant General of a Division in the Army of General Joseph E. Johnston, After remaining in the far South for some ime, Major Daves returned to Raleigh and was connected with the Bureau of Conscription. Having resigned his com mission as major, Mr. Daves served in the Conscription Department without rank, but later was made first lieutenant and attached as an aide to the staff of General General T. H. Holmes. He was then temporarily in the division of General R. F. Hoke. Being among the troops of General Johnston who were surrendered near Greensboro, he was paroled on the 26th of April, 1865. While at Wilmington, in November, 1862, Major Daves was married to Miss Alice DeRosset, of an old Cape Fear family, and the daughter of Dr. Armand J. DeRosset. After a happy married life of thirty-five years, Mrs Daves died on the second of September, 1897, leaving no issue. For many years prior to his death, Major Daves was a diligent student of North Carolina history, and many written contributions of great value on that subject emanated from his pen. He was also prominently identified with many patriotic movements and organizations. The work of restoring and beautifying the landing place of the early colonists on Roanoke Island, which was begun by his brother, the late Prof. Edward Graham Daves, of Baltimore, was successfully continued by Major Daves, and he was president of the Roanoke Colony Memorial Association at the time of his death. He was also a member of the State Literary and Historical Association, the Confederate Veterans Association, Society of Sons of the Revolution, and an honorary member and vice-president of the State Society of the Cincinnati. In the last named organization, Mr. John Collins Daves, of Baltimore, a nephew of Major Daves, is the hereditary representative of Captain John Daves, of the Revolution who was one of the original members of the order.
