A Large Cotton Stalk.

Capt. K. R. Jones exhibited a cotton stalk yesterday, the growth of which was something remarkable. About the middle of May the Captain planted a cotton seed in his garden and gave it no special would develop in conditions no altogether favorable for large growth.

Imagine his surprise when he found that the stalk had reached a height of 11 feet-a size not often attained outside of a specially fortilized field. The thickness of the stalk was a quarter of an inch. There were 210 cotton balls and 75 blooms.

Capt Jones thinks if he had planted the seed earlier in the season during the cotton planting time it would have been proportionately larger for having been planted earlier.

At six years of age Johnny Millals lived with his parents at Dinan, in Brittany. The great delight of the little fellow and his elder brother was to watch the French soldiers who were constantly marching through the town, The roll call generally took place in a square, and on being disbanded each soldier was presented with a loaf of black bread, which he stuck on the top of his bayonet and then shouldered his rifle.

On one occasion the two boys gazed with amagement and delight at a great drum major who was covered with gold trappings and wore a huge bearskin, while he flourished a gold headed cane.

Johnny Millais at once got out his sketchbook and proceeded to jot down the giant into his book. Meanwhile, unknown to the little artist, two officers had come up behind him and were greatly astonished to find such a baby sketching so well. They patted the boy on the back, gave him some money and asked where he lived, and the boy took them to his father and mother. Then the officers took the sketch back to the barracks with them and showed it around as the work of a how of six. But their brother officers would not believe this to be possible, so bets were taken, and one of them went to fetch little Millais and prove their vords.

In fear and trembling he came, but soon showed he really had done the drawing by making then and there a still better sketch of the colonel smoking a cigar.
