Everybody's Magazine For October.

Everybody's Magazine begins to be something more than an entertaining ten cents' worth of fiction and articles. An identity has been developed -- a sturdy and aggressive identity all its own and full of interest and promise. Thus far, The finding of the two convicts Medlin the magazine has prided itself on the nd Rice hidden in a loft at the penitenfound itself, entered on its own mission, headed out on its particular crusade. The key-note of this individuality is the is thought that these men had attemped article by Alfred Henry Lewis, in the Octo dig a sort of tunnel under part of the tober number, "The Madness of Much Money." This is a scathing attack on the vulgar displays of great wealth to which the new generation of millionaires has treated the country. With a brutal directness Mr. Lewis diagnoses the mad- Dr. Petty's Natural Stock Lick. ness which often goes with much and sudden wealth, and ridicules unsparingly the gilded idlers who make up the secalled American aristocracy. It is a rough even a pitiless arraignment of certain prominent persons and it is safe to be generally read and appreciated all over the country. Throughout this number the magazine shows a purpose to depart from the baleful worship of Mammon from the baleful worship of Mammon He Has Been and its possessors which characterizes so much of the writings in current periodicals.

> Grammar and Writing. One day Julian Hawthorne was comdimenting a certain writer on his wonderful facility in his bundling of words and in his construction of sentences. "You are a master of phrases," said the novelist, with a twinkle, and > then added: "How do you do it, anyhow?" "I don't know," replied the writer. "You see, I have forgotten all that I ever learned at school except that the osition governs the objective case. To save my life I couldn't tell you the rence between the present tense and a predicate. I write by ear and don't know any more about grammar than a cockroach knows about paint-

> "That's all right, my boy, that's all right," said Hawthorne dryly. "No man who's a purist and a master of style ever knows anything about gram-

> How Bright Joined Cobden. John Bright's account of how he and Richard Cobden came to join forces against the corn laws early in the last century is as follows: "I was in the depths of grief, I might also say of despair, for the light and sunshine of my house had been extinguished. All that was left on earth of my life and of a too brief happiness was lying still and cold in the chamber above us. Mr. Cobden called upon me, and, hav-ing expressed words of condolence, said; There are thousands of houses riand at this moment where wives, mothers and children are dying of hunger. Now, when the first parox am of your grief is past I wou vise you to come with me and we will over rest till the corn law is repealed. The offer was accepted and the work
