Potomac Improvements. The work of improving the Potomac river bolow Washington under the present project has been completed, and General Gillesple says no further appropriation is required therefor. A channel only 200 feet wide is, however. regarded as rather contracted for a river of the width and importance of the Potomac and especially in view of the location of the Washington navy yard upon its shores. It is believed that an increase in width of this channel to 400 feet will soon be authorized by congress.

On the street quite a crowd had gathered out of curiosity to see Dixon, but Sheriff Taylor quickiy had his prisoner in his conveyance, and was rapidly driven away towards Trenton. A dispatch from Trenton last night gave the information that Sheriff Taylor arrived there in afternoon with his prisoner, Dixon, all safe and sound. Dixon was in fine spirits until he entered the jall yard and saw the preparations being made for the execution when it is raid that he utterly collapsed and shricked and plead for mercy. It was expected that he would make a confession while under the influence of the terror but he did not only in part. He acknowledged being present at the time Mr Webber was killed but denied that he did the shooting.

At eight o'clock last night it was reported that everything was quiet at Frenton and no attempt to liberate Dixon was anticipated or feared.
