"Yes, Delarmei's barking cat, You know Delarmel, the French laryngologist? No?

"Well, Delarmel, to prove a certain ellegation of his, operated on a cat's rocal cords and larynx in such a way as to cause the animal to bark like a dog. The singular freak attracted no great attention among releatista, but showmen from all parts of the world besieged Delarmel, imploring him to make barking cats for them. "A cat furiously and hoarsely barkng would be a strange, attractive signit and one that would prove a splendid drawing card for showmen. These men accordingly offered Delarmei sums from $100 up to $1,000 for barking cats. He could have sold undoubtedly 1,000 of them at $200 apiece. For the rest of his life he could have kept profitably employed at this work, buying ordinary cats for a dime or so and turning them out barkers as valuable - horses. "Delarmel, though, we ld not stoop. that has been dead now for two years."--Philadelphia Bulletia,
