EDUCATION AND ITS ASSOCIATES

Getting an education ought to be more than the acquirement of the knowledge of books, just the learning which gives its possessor the ability to read the signs which shall make the daily life one different from that of the purely illiterate person.

There are many young person books, whose parents and guardians lice them in the way of acquiring an education, which shall make them selfproviders, therefore useful to the world, and beyond this, even, they have acquired a knowledge which rightly employed, [means a special value to dispensary, will argue that, men are their community.

rightful application which means everything to its possessor, and those with whom this possessor of a good education comes in contact. Every youth ought to have the kind of education which enables the individual selfexamination, to detect any flaw, and correct it, so that the individual may have a clear perception and be able to skilfully associate with the education gained, self-reliance, self-respect and personal usefulness, for with these goes the ability to carn a satisfactory livelihood, and prove a valued member of any community.

In this day and age, the importance of an education which embraces a thorough manual training, ought not to be overlooked or under estimated by parent and guardian, for the young woman with such a manus training, cannot make a failure in life, unless through personal wilful-

The value of a manual training of the youth of either sex, proves the need of such a course of education in every school, public and private, so that it may not be out of the reach of any child, and all friends and supporters of education should use their influence in establishing manual training branches in every school, so that no child may grow up and go forth to do battle in the world, without some knowledge of a trade which can be employed to secure a livelihood, and such a trade learned, that the person shall find it of a character that is suitable, that is a profession or trade that is congenial as possible, therefore inspiring to the worker, for congenial work is not hard work, and nearly every person may find a life work that means not slave work, for work, however, hard is easily endured, If the worker takes interest in it.

A PANACEA FOR EARTHLY TROU-BLES.

In an age like the present, when the tendency is to go at once to what may appear the root of every trouble, it is not surprising that wild theories are proposed, and in some quarters acceptd as a sure panacea for existing hu-

EXCUSES FOR ACCEPTING EVILS

If special thought or attention given to it, the investigator will be surprised to note the number and character of excuses made for every day vices, and further the persons who will offer, or at least accept excuses, for indulgence of vices.

Probably greatest of all is the vice of liquor drinking. The average person, and this includes professing Christians, will declare it to be a necessary evil, as though any evil could be sowho go beyond this mere knowledge of classed.
