An Explanation

For several days the print of the Journal has been very dim and in some cases scarcely readable. In explanation we would say that it is one of those cases in which the office is prevented from giving good service on account of the weather.

We have ordered new rolls and expect to receive them any day, and after the proper seasoning time, about ten days we shall again be able to produce a paper that can be read.

A RAMBUNCTIOUS NEGRO

Constable Dwight Styron Gives One of the Smart Blows of the Race a Warm Time.

Constable Dwight Styron had another exciting time with a negro yesterday which however did not have the elements of excitement that he had a few weeks ago when two negroes took him unaware.

A few days ago the wife of James Henry Bryan swore out a warrant in Justice Street's court on her husband for assault. He knowing the action his wife had taken, kept out of sight.

This attempt to talk was repeated two or three times, finally when he had reached Mr. Draney's house Bryan went across the street to speak to two men and the constable followed him.

Escaped Constable Caught. Uno Washington, who was convicted of larceny in the month of March and sentenced to the State Prison, broke away from the State Prison with two other men, and was caught by Washington yesterday.
