A Serious Lettuce Disease

Throughout the lettucegrowing secion, and particularly conspicuous in the neighborhood of New Bern, Wilmington, Fayetteville and Maxton, occurs a disease of lettuce of extreme sev-rity and destructiveness. It may be easily recognized by its symptoms.

The disease begins with the wilting of the outer lower leaves, which droop and fall flat upon the ground. A similar fate rapidly overtakes the inner leaves, and so on over the whole plant, till within a few days the entire plant is dead, lying flat upon the ground.

Upon the under side and at the base the leaves will be noticed, at this ime, dense cotton-like growthee (Mycelium), and in the later stages small black, irregular bodies (Sclerotia) from a quarter of an inch long and some what less in thickness will be found in similar situation. The Sclerotia and mycelium are unmistaken signs of this disease.

This disease is know as the''drop' and has for several years been a serious menace to lettuce growing in many portions of the United States. It is caused by a fungus visible to the eye as the mycelium and sclerotia referred to above. If this fungus once gains entrance to the lettuce bed, no certain, or at least no economical treatment is known to get rid of it.

It is therefore extremely important that all growers who are now free of this disease take every precaution to keep free of it, also any growers who have a portions of their beds free should use every precaution to keep that portion from becoming infected.

These precautions consist in preventing any diseased plants or fragment of discased plants or any of the mycelium or sclerotia from obtaining access to infected fields or beds. As soon as any plant shows an indication of this disease the plant should pe pulled up buried with lime, or destroyed by fire. The spot from which the plant was pulled should be thoroughly drenched with Bordeaux Mixture. If these precautions are followed, by those people who are not at all or only slightly affec ted with this disease, it will probably be possible to hold the disease in he had visted Oak Grove and that the Sunday School at that place had been revived and new officers appointed. The roll of school was called. Gallilee and Kitts Swamp were represented and reported schools in good working order. Bro J. A. Askin, made an excellent address, taking for his subject Cause and Effect in the Sunday Schools. He spoke briefly of the origin of the Sunday School and the great good done by them since they were started. Claude and Maggie Campbell recited some excellent selections which added to the pleasure of the meeting. Much to the regret of all present, Mr. Daniel Lane was unable to attend the convention, but Rev. W G Walker filled his place in the program, making an interesting and instructive addres. He spoke of the better advantages, by way of Sunday Schools, enjoyed by the children of today than those of fifty years ago, when our parents were children. He attributed, to a great extent, his being a preacher of the gospel to the influrence of the Sunday S hool, and urged upon the parents the duty of going with their children to Sunday School, insist-ing that they needed its influence as much as the children, besides setting a good example. He closed his remarks with some good advice to the teachers and officers, especially emphasizing the necessity of always being on hand at the right time. Bros. Askin and Basnight, responded
