MILES OF FLOWERING FENCE.

Landscape Art and Garden Craft at Jamestown Exposition Will be a Pleasing Spectacle.

(By George F. Vitt.)

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 18th.—Some two years ago there was secured for the purpose of a great exposition, an area of woodland at Sewell's Point...

Involving facts and figures of magnitude and quality a disquisition dealing with any feature of the forthcoming Jamestown exposition offers but scant opportunity for exaggeration...

Along the two and a half miles of splendid water frontage a quadruple row of adult trees have been planted, involving the transplanting of thousands of specimens.

The great parade ground, presenting a level stretch of green sward and occupying a central position, affords a sense of spaciousness and gives the perspective necessary to an appreciation of the stately groupings of buildings and verdure.

design has given exquisite harmony; and forms and masses, blending here and contrasting there, tell the story of system and order.

DETERMINED FOR NEW COUNTY.

Scotch Perseverance a Strong Feature in Effort to Get New County

Raleigh, Feb. 18.—Some member of the legislature in explaining his vote on the Lee county bill yesterday that the Scotchmen who were pressing so earnestly for the new county would stick at it, even if it took twenty years to win, and he recalled the prayer of the old Scotchman who asked the Lord to start him right, for as a Scotchman started so he would stay. Now it seems that the next effort is to be for the new county to have the name of Melver.

Important Division of Sociology.

Norfolk, Feb. 16.—Social economy, which has been defined as the philosophy of humanity, is to receive attention at the Jamestown Exposition, as a section of the department of history and education. This subject, which has so broad a range, covering as it does all the relations of humans with each other and with the conditions under which they live, politically, industrially and socially, will be treated in divisions and subdivisions. Of these perhaps none is more interesting than that which relates to the child under the head of "Juvenile Court."

Miss Minnie Bronson, who is chief of the department of Social Economy of the Jamestown Exposition, on the subject of the juvenile court and its relations to the care of the child says: "Broad philanthropy recognizes the fact that the best way to prevent crime and to protect the citizen is to rescue the children who are destitute and neglected, and those who display premature symptoms of wrong-doing, by bringing to bear upon them educational and formative influences and preventing their association with burdened criminals."

"In the case of delinquent children, we have come to believe in the last twenty five years of growth that children who commit crime are not necessarily criminals, and that it is better not to treat them as such."

"It happens more often than not that when the real cause of a crime is inquired into, it is found to be the mere boyish love for adventure which has run wild because of environment, lack of care, thoughtlessness or misdirected energy. The boy may be technically a thief. He is not, in truth one, at all. We may be made such by mismanagement in his correction. The necessity of saving this boy from the influences of prison life and of giving right direction to his boyish enthusiasm is apparent."

"With this thought in mind, the new method of dealing with juvenile criminals was projected. I refer to juvenile courts."

"The exhibit will include copies of laws under which each court operator, printed reports showing comparison with previous methods, letters from teachers, public officials, etc., reviewing the work; charts showing the number and ages of children in court within a given period; others showing the percentage and forms of delinquency, etc., photographs of the houses of detention, if one exists, and its inmates, and histories of typical cases."

"Thus visitors to the exposition, who are interested in such matters will find in it a comprehensive school in tabular form of the lessons learned throughout the country by careful study and experiment."
