INSTITUTION TO ENCOURAGE THE WOMEN ARE ALL TALKING ABOUT PE-RU-NA The Eastern North Carolina Industrial Academy flying Negroes

Splendid Education.

It is gratifying to note the progress of the colored race, where it is progress worth while and in the industrial education of negroes we find such progress based upon principles that are worthy to be commended. The Eastern North Carolina Industrial Academy is an institution of which the Journal has spoken of from time to time and has praised the good work being done there. A visit to this school will convince any one that the education that the negro boy, girl, young man or young woman is valuable to them in a practical way and worth more than a literary or classical education. The president, Rev. William Sutton, has had the good fortune to gather an attendance of about 300 pupils, both-local residents and many from a distance. The building on Biddle avenue, although, scarcely large enough for the needs of the school has been made to serve its purposes very well.

The work done by the primary scholars is the first that attracts attention. They have been taught to draw and the use of colors. They show admirable taste in the selection of colors and when a model is set be fore them they follow its lines very well. Specimens of writing by these small children are also of a very excellent order.

Upstairs in the same building is the assembly room and where the girls and young women learn to sew. Specimens of their work is on exhibition in the room and shows that in either fancy or plain sewing they have been faithful to their instruction. They are accomplishing much in this domestic art and are making foundaflons for substantial employment.

The broom factory is an interesting place to visit. About a dozen boys are busily engaged at the different machines the products of which are brooms and whisks. These articles find a ready sale and prove to be a source of quite a large revenue. Then the boys are put to work at cultivating small tracts of land under a competent overseer. Last year they planted cotton which resulted in two bales. They raised a quantity of beans and peas for the market. Industrial activity is seen in every department and we are informed that the pupils take up their work with zeal and earnestness signifying that the instructors have won the respect of the students and that they have all become impressed with importance of getting a thorough and practical education. Assisting Rev. Sutton are R. W. Wetherington, Rev. Coward and two women teachers and Joe Sutton, foreman of the broom factory. The ol is n great need of a building
