"The country uses from three to four times as much timber every year as all the forests of the United States grow in the same time," is a warning rang in by the government's forest service of the agricultural department. And the prediction is made that a timber famine is not only pessible but not very prebable in the near future.

The last few days have been exceedingly favorable for vegetable growth and truck crops are doing well now. Beans that have come up since the cold snap or where the plants were not killed are looking very well. Of course the crop will be late, but there is no reason vet why it should not be abundant. Irish potatoes are growing rapidly and the stand appears to be fairly good. Cabbage, turnips, peas and beets are being shipped.

The first peas received in this market were grown in James City and were shipped on the steamer Neuse Monday evening, only a few baskets, perhaps forty. Nearly five hundred baskets left here by steamer, Tuesday. On account of the late spring and severe weather the crop is late in maturing. The early blessoms were destroyed by the cold thereby causing a loss of perhaps a picking. The vines at this time now seem to be covered with a profusion of blossoms.

Street cleaning in small cities and towns is a very annoying problem. and many expedients are resorted to in its solution. The papers a few weeks ago told of a town which was tidied by the business men who took half a day off to do the work. Another town passed an ordinance that each householder as owner of property should sweep and keep clean the street and sidewalk in front of same. But the original plan for cleaning a city was an inspiration of a woman's club. Ther rubbish in the streets and alleys of Trenton, Mo., was as abundant as it is in some towns not so distant. When the women decided to "clean up" and ad appeared offering 20 cents a hundred for old tin cans and in a day on two 78,000 cans were brought in by boys. 100

The Norfolk & Southern railroad has added a new passenger engine to its locomotive equipment. It is a very fine piece of machinery, some what larger than the other engines, size of the cylinder being 18 inches. It was made at the Baldwin Works in Philadelphia. It was put into its first service last night to pull the mail to Beaufort.

Arrangements for the baseball seaon are fast approaching completion and in a satisfactory manner. The management went into the proposition with the understanding that all subscribers should pay the amount they pledged in full.
