Movement to Erect Memorial to First Confederate Killed in Battle.

Special Correspondence.

Raleigh, June 20.—The movement for a monument in the capitol square, the official title of which is Union Square, to the memory of Henry A. Wyatt, the Confederate soldier killed in battle is taking very good shape, and contributions are being made in several counties. A Virginian, who served in the army and who is here today declared that Wyatt was a Virginian but merely happened to come to North Carolina and enlist and he also denied that Wyatt was the first man killed, saying Capt. Marr of Virginia, had that honor. Then he went on to say that he had been told by some Virginia veterans at the reunion at Richmond that they intended to see that the monument which North Carolina put up at Appomattox two years ago was either removed or that the inscription there on was modified. The gentleman made this statement quite publicly and in the presence of a number of persons, some of them state officials.

Vandemere.

June 18.—This does not feel like June 18th, when an overcoat and a fire is needed to make one comfortable. If summer does not come until July we will likely have a late fall, if so, it will help the farmers out wonderfully.

Work on the W. & V. railroad on this end has almost suspended on account of the swamp being so full of water. There is about three miles graded on this end and about four and a half miles have been cut out.

Transportation here now is not satisfactory at all. We almost have none. The steamer Blanche having stopped running here, the steamer "Uncle Sam" made a start to run here, but we have been informed that she will likely stop; well if "Uncle Sam" won't help us, to whom shall we apply?

Well the old sail boats will get there after a while, so we guess the Annie E. and Centennial will be put in commission.

Our potato crop has been short this year, very few farmers planted potatoes, and those who planted made a very short crop.

Cotton is looking very small, and unless we have some warm weather soon the crop will very likely be short.

Corn is looking well, and with seasons suitable from now on, there will be a good crop made.

Fishing in our waters this year has been almost a failure. Up to this time we hardly ever get a fish to eat; when at this time of the year we usually get a plenty of the fluky tribe with the hook and line. Where are they?

While the morals of our little town is not what we would like, yet we can boast of one thing; our people generally attend church service, with few exceptions. We are glad to see this. And when we asked for a collection on Sunday night at our prayer meeting for the Chinese sufferers, the people responded liberally. We expect to build a church here during the year, the house we used heretofore having been burned not long since.

Where there is smoke there must be fire, and unless we are badly mistaken, our very kind register of deeds will have some work to do, as well as some minister of the gospel, or a justice of the peace. How about a register of deeds getting his license, if he should want to take a help-meet? Who will issue them?

Business is dull, and the drummers find it hard work to convince the merchant that he needs more goods just now, but they will call around, and try to convince a fellow that he is "short" on his or her.

The steam tug Carrie X. and the freeman are at New Bern, the Carrie X. for repairs and the freeman—well he had better come home.

We are at this writing, having a heavy rain, and is very stormy, the wind is blowing from north which gives us a high tide.

BURIAL OF W. R. STEVENSON

Remains of the Dead Midshipman Receive Quiet and Peaceful Interment From Those Who Loved Him.

The true measurement of life is not to be found, in the count of the years lived. A day or week has given the world a man, because his deeds could be accounted worthy. Men have lived their half-century, their four score, and gone to their graves unwept and unknown, the world no gainer, so far as man could see by their having lived. Sorrow has hung over many households in this city for the past seven days. It was a sorrow tinged with an uncertainty, because while death of a loved one was beyond reasonable doubt, yet the form of the presumed dead one was not to be found or seen. With the recovery of the remains of Midshipman William Hollister Stevenson, the uncertainty became a certainty, the sorrow in one degree was lessened, and yet sorrow deep and poignant filled the hearts of many, not only of the dead youth's own family, but the hearts of others, not of kin, but of earthly friendship.

It is human to grieve, to mourn, to lament, when death comes to deprive us of one very dear. But when a further loss is taken, when the tears are brushed aside, and the vision settled, when "Thy will be done," is the hearts' acceptance, then is there the blessed memory of the life of William H. Stevenson, the boy, the youth, the young man, and in the years allotted him, is found the heritage well begun and continued, the years filled with attributes that makes true living, and a life rounded to full completion, from the Divine standpoint, though from the frail, human point of view, there seems the incompleteness. Noble and truly blessed, is this life, which lived fulfilling its every duty, and even went to death with the same unflinching confidence of success, as filled its every living purpose!

"Death is the crown of life, Were death denied, poor man would live in vain;

Were death denied, to live would not be life."

There was a large number of relatives and friends at the station, yesterday morning, as the train from Goldsboro, arrived, bearing the remains of William Hollister Stevenson. Accompanied these were Messrs—E. K. Bishop and Mark Stevenson. The tender of a representative from the Minnesota crew was made, but it was judged best that such an escort was unnecessary. A magnificent floral piece from the crew of the Minnesota was sent. From the station to Cedar Grove cemetery, there was a long procession of mourners. The pall bearers were: Messrs. Jones, Wahah, Wade, Meadows, J. F. Patterson, S. H. Eaton, Frank George, J. S. Claypool, Wm. Dunn, Jr., and Ralph Davesport. At the cemetery, the services were simple and impressive, as the mourners waited the burial. Rev. J. G. Garth read a selection of scripture, after a hymn had been sung by the choir. Prayer and another hymn closed the religious services.

Announcement for Teacher's Examinations.

Special to Journal.

Raleigh, June 19.—The State Board of Education announces that the first examinations for five certificates for public school teachers will be held by each county superintendent the second Thursday in July. This order is under the new law which also fixes the minimum monthly salary of holders of such certificates at $55. The first examinations for high school teachers certificates will be held July 25. The minimum monthly salary is $100.

WENT TO SLEEP ON TRACK

The services of Coroner Required for Man Who Did It.

Special Correspondence.
Greensboro, June 19.—This morning Coroner J. P. Turner was called to investigate the cause of a white man found terribly cut and mangled by the railroad track, two miles from here, near Holt's Chapel. The body proved to be that of Charles Cheek, aged 42, who lived near Burlington. He was in Greensboro late yesterday afternoon. He had evidently been walking home, and must have sat down on the track and fallen asleep and was struck by the passenger train going to Raleigh and leaving here at 1.50 this morning.

GREATER RALEIGH DAY JULY 1

People To Make Sure of the Plans to Extend City Limits.

Special Correspondence.

Raleigh, June 19.—A charter is granted the Dove Keith and Conneley Company of Northside, Granville county, to do a lumber business, build houses, etc., capital stock $50,000. Another charter is to the Cavaliers club of Durham, this having no capital stock. It is to be a social organization and about 100 well known gentlemen of that place are the incorporators.

The exercises on Greater Raleigh Day here, July 1, will be held at the state fair grounds instead of in the grove at St. Mary's school, as in case of a rain the buildings can shelter thousands of persons and there are already speakers stands, tables, etc. The barbecue will be the largest ever given in this part of North Carolina and it is estimated about 1,000 persons will be present and partake of it.

SHOT WHILE SHOOTING CRAP

Fate of Negro Gambler at Hands of Unknown Companions.

Special Correspondence.
Greensboro, June 19.—Coroner Turner yesterday investigated the case of Oscar Kearnes, a negro, whose dead body was found on the outskirts of High Point. The man had three bullet holes in his back. It was explained that he had been gambling Sunday, and had grabbed the stakes and ran, and had been shot while running. In the leaves ahead of him were found two dice, one half-dollar and two quarters and four dimes. The supposition is that he had these in his hands, and when the death shot struck, he fell forward and the money and dice flew from his relaxed grasp. Dr. Turner brought back the evidence of a murder instead of a suicide. No clue has yet been found as to the men who did the shooting.

Everybody's Magazine for July.

No more vitally interesting article has appeared in a long time than "Brain and Body," in the July Everybody's. The author, Dr. William Hanna Thomson, a recognized authority, presents what to most of us will be an entirely new conception of the brain, facts of the greatest practical importance in mental training and he puts it in a simple, easily comprehended form unusual in a scientific writer. It is a notable contribution.

Fiction occupies a suitably prominent place in the July number with such writers as Mary R. S. Andrews, Stewart Edward White, O. Henry, and Lloyd Osburne, but the editor finds space besides for a number of interesting articles. One of the most entertaining of these is "The Aristocracy of the Circus," by Hartley Davis, an historical account of certain famous circus families. It is illustrated with a number of unusual circus photographs.

The second of Will Payne's series, "The Cheat of Overcapitalization," is especially timely in its account of the enormous inflation of railroad securities. Charles E. Russell in "The Seuz Canal," finds some lessons for our own canal project, and Arnold White writes interestingly about the English House of Lords.

EDITORS BOOM EXPOSITION

National Association Gives Expression to a Series of Commendatory Resolutions.

Norfolk, Va., June 19.—The National Editorial Association closed a very enjoyable session at the Jamestown Tercentennial, June 15th and so highly pleased were the members with the exposition that they included the following resolutions pertaining to the great celebration:

"That our thanks are tendered to the officials of the Jamestown Tercentennial Exposition for the occasion of our presence and assembly here; a pleasure and an experience which will ever be replete and rich in our memories as the years pass by. That we profoundly thank them for their tender and grant of all possible courtesies and generous unstinted hospitalities which have been so heartily appreciated and enjoyed and in this expression of our sentiments, we wish to bear testimony to the grand and exceptional array of attractions which will distinguish this splendid enterprise from the great expositions of the past; its central location amidst the scene of great and historical interest, its peculiar and intense educational environments reviving the highest order of patriotic emulation and pride. The stupendous and unprecedented display and concentration of the steel clad navies of the world an event unique and unparalleled and without probability of duplication for decades to come; the assembly and array of the soldiery of our land embracing all arms of the service and its exposition of the industries, manufactures, commerce and the arts forming a potentiality of attractions that should bring every earnest, true and loyal American to its threshold.

A Correction.

To the Editor of Journal:
The following is an answer to the incorrect statements made by a clergyman in a sermon recently preached in this city:

W. FEREBEE, Assistant Publication Committee.

In answer to the query concerning the price of tuition in Mrs. Eddy's college, I would say it is at the present time $75, not $200. Mrs. Eddy has not taught in the college during a period of about 17 years. Her last class, composed of 70 students, was an invited class. From these she accepted no tuition fee. I know nothing about her charities, except that I now and then hear of her contributions to various public enterprises. She has given as high as one thousand dollars to one institution. There is no comparison between Mrs. Eddy's methods and the methods of the late Alexander Dowle. Mr. Dowle had the reputation of being a "common scold." He attacked almost every form of religion. On the contrary, Mrs. Eddy has always attended strictly to her own affairs. She has said "I love the Orthodox church, and in time it will love Christian Science." She has given of her money to other religious denominations and institutions. She is interested in the general welfare of mankind, and labors constantly for universal peace and harmony.

Yours Sincerely,
ALFRED FARLOW,
General manager of the publication work for the Christian Science church.

RAIN NOT MUCH NEEDED

The Heavy Showers Have Created Damage Rather Than Help.

Special Correspondence.
Raleigh, June 19.—Considerable rain fell last night. Farmers said it was not needed. The effects of the great rain last Thursday night have not ended. The washing of lands was unusually severe. Cotton has made some progress this week. The Progressive Farmer today has telegrams from all the cotton growing states. That from Texas says there is 10 per cent reduction in the stand of cotton. That planting is still in progress; that the boll weevil is numerous, wide-spread and active and that crops are grassy and that further that recently there have been only four working days. Cotton in Georgia is extremely small. The prospects in Alabama are the worst in many years and many say they have never seen such conditions in a generation, continued rains and cold weather causing the trouble. The crop is from three to six weeks late. The stand of cotton in Mississippi is fair. Low lands were re-planted last week. Plants are small. Thirty per cent of the crop is unchopped and very grassy; the situation is now critical and two weeks of dry weather will be required to relieve the situation. The acreage in South Carolina is the same as at this time last year but the crop is from four to six weeks late.

In the midland and eastern half of the state the stands are fairly good, but elsewhere they are bad. Tennessee expects only half a crop and it is five weeks later than in any previous year. Practically the entire crop was replanted and much of it is only now coming up, chopping having just begun and the stands being universally poor. Many farmers are plowing up cotton and planting peas and corn. Half a crop seems probable. Arkansas has the worst crop in 33 years and never has the prospect been so unfavorable. These reports sent to the Progressive Farmer are made by the presidents of the state divisions of the Southern Cotton Association. Georgia may be taken as a type of them all, for in addition what has been said above in regard to it the report adds that the plant is extremely small and apparently lifeless and that not over half a dozen counties have the prospect of an average crop.

On the other hand the reports to the Memphis Commercial Appeal published last Monday say the crop is improved and that the weather has been much more favorable as regards temperature, sunshine and rainfall; that the plant looks healthier and that cultivation is making good progress. That there is some grass in all sections; this trouble being the worst in the southern Mississippi valley; that the boll weevil is numerous and that poor stands are complained of and that the crop is late. The crop has improved materially in Texas, though plants are still small. Some replanting was done last week in the hope that a small picking might be gotten from it. South Texas is still very late, the boll weevil numerous and doing some damage.

Dr. and Mrs. Rowland Are Prohibited From Seeing Friends.

Special Correspondence.

Raleigh, June 20.—There were no new developments in the Rowland case today, except that the attorneys for Dr. and Mrs. Rowland have absolutely put a stop to all visiting and only permit relatives to see the prisoners at the jail. This course had to be taken. Mrs. De Vanem, a sister of Mrs. Rowland is selling all the furniture at the residence of the late Engineer Charles R. Strange. It is stated that Mrs. Rowland has a father and mother in Nebraska and that they know very little about what is going on here. Such was the statement made today by a prominent man.

KILL THE DOGS.

Mad Dog Bites Several Canines and Creates Havoc.

A mad dog was killed on East Front street by Officer Lupton last night after the animal had bitten several other dogs; the number said to be 12. This is a serious state of affairs and it is really true that so many dogs were bitten there is only one thing to do; shoot every dog that has been bitten or that is suspected. It is no time to consider the animal's value as a pet or watch dog, it involves the safety of the community and an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. If it is necessary to kill every dog in the city better to do that than to be harboring the fear that the dog has been bitten. We do not want to turn this city into a pasture institute.

REGRETTED FINLEY'S ABSENCE

ENGINEER BALDWIN SCALDED TO DEATH

Able Address on Freight Rate Discrimination by Corporation Commissioner Brown.

Special Correspondence.
Greensboro, June 20.—At the opening of the morning session, Mr. H. C. Brown, clerk of the State Corporation Commission, addressed the body on the question of "Freight Rate Discrimination." It was a splendid presentation of the question, dealing in facts and figures that were convincing of the charge that every town in North Carolina was injured by the present system of basing rates. He said he hoped that President Finley could be present as he felt sure facts given would convert him and bring about a change for the better. Mr. Brown ridiculed the idea that their distributive point rates were based on "scientific principles and said he had never been able to get a railroad official to say that he knew any thing about it.

A letter was read from Gov. Glenn expressing regret at being unable to attend and make an address. In this letter the governor in calling attention to the fact that $4,000 had been appropriated by the legislature for the purpose of obtaining counsel to assist in fighting freight discrimination, and urged that a strong case be instituted and carried before the Corporation Commissioners of the state and nation. He also urged the merchants to do all within their power for good roads.

A letter of regret from President W. W. Finley of the Southern railway was also read. President Finley took issue with President Sawyer who invited him to speak had been impudent enough to say that as there were two sides to all questions the merchants desired to hear from both. After declaring there was but one side to the question Mr. Finley proceeded to say that in the next few years the railroads should spend a great deal of money in Southern road improvement and most of it would go into the hands of the retail merchants. It therefore behooved them to go slow in preventing this prospect of a golden harvest to them. Strange to say, the reading of this provoked rounds of laughter.

ENGINEER BALDWIN SCALDED TO DEATH

Terrible Fate of Railroad Employee on the Norfolk & Southern Road at Plymouth.

News reached New Bern yesterday morning of a fearful accident on the Norfolk & Southern road at Plymouth. The details are meagre but sufficient information was received to show the extent of the damage. While shifting cars in the depot yards the engine and four freight cars jumped the track and the engine went over on its side. Mr. H. J. Baldwin was the engineer and he was caught under the locomotive and was scalded to death.

Mr. Baldwin had recently come to the Norfolk & Southern from Tennessee and made his headquarters at New Bern, boarding at Mrs. H. E. Royal's boarding house. The train was a solid freight. No statement was made as to the amount of damage done additional to the derailing of cars and upsetting of the engine. The fireman received slight injuries.
