AMERICAN JUSTICE OR IS IT GIFT?

Two divergent views seem to taken of this country's action, in the now impending settlement of this country's claims against 'China, for damages growing out of Boxer uprising in 1900. The intention of President Roosevelt is to ask congress to scale down the Boxer award, to less than $12,000,000, in actual figures $11,-

By the terms of the treaty China was to pay to the United States a sum slightly less than $25,000,000 in annual instalments running through 39 years, with interest. So far there has been collected $6,000,000, and out of this has been paid all the claims of American missionaries for property destroyed and lives lost in the uprising amounting to about $2,00,000. A careful estimate has just been completed of the expense to which the United States government was put by the military operations in China, the naval expenses and the losses suffered at American consulate. These aggregate $9,000,000, and at the rate the payments have been made recently it is expected the total will be met in the course of four or five years more. The total sum that China would have been obliged to pay to the United States in the 39 years would be not less than $59,000,000.

Here is where the question of opin ion comes in. How China must feel about this proposed action of the president is best shown in the words of the retiring Chinese minister. Sir Chentung Liang Cheng, who said in a recent Interview:

"You cannot emphasize too strongly. my great admiration for the fair spirit which has always characterized the dealings of the United States with my country. This final action is another monument to America's high sense of instice and I feel called upon to say that personally I feel that America is one of China's strongest friends."

And taken from the pound of flesh, business transaction, point of view, this country is actually giving China $47,000,000. But will not this country be the gainer, inevery way in the end? What prompted the United States to interfere, in the Boxer uprising, but the impulse to preserve our people? Certainly it was not to gain, pecuniarily, and the fact that the president seeks only actual damages, cannot but place this country in an honorable position before the world. American justice, that which should ever govern the United States in its dealings, should be the course of those who administer our public affairs.

THE SCRUTINY OF THE FOREIGN IMMIGRANT.

The death signal is not known to people of the smaller cities, as any thing startling. Neither is the "black hand" more than symbolical of crime to the ordinary reader, who sees it in the newspaper. But in New York city and the large cities the "black hand" bands are becoming a serious problem. a criminal menace of exceedingly threatening import. How are the secret organizations of Italian and Sicilian criminals, to be controlled for they must be controlled, if dezation does not follow their nefour practices is a question to be id, hand was seen in a New York ort room the other day when a priser, in his confession, was halted by st, an Hallan. The signal was given so openly that both judge and lawyers of R. The reports says that the itness at first allurmed, afterwards ontinued the confession of the crime, and the guilty man was punished. In Chicago, the house of an Italian was dynamited a few days ago, because its occupant refused the demands of the secret society, to pay $1,000. Cases of murder, kidnapping and blackmail, are being constantly recorded in the press columns.

And while the police authorities of the larger cities are struggling with the criminals already in the country, powerful assistance could be given by the immigration authorities in barring from America all natives of southern Europe who cannot prove that they are law-abiding workmen. King Victor Emmanuel already has put forward a plan to accomplish this very purpose. He is urging the closer cooperation of Italian and American inspectors that the criminals among the immigrants may be detected and returned to Italy, there to be dealt with by the Italian authorities. There is need of some such cooperative system. whereby recruits to the "black hand" bands in this country will be stopped coming as immigrants. The honest immigrant can have no fear, but the immigrant without credentials, should be closely scrutinized, before given entrance to this country.

CHARACTER PORTRAYAL AT BALL

GROUNDS. Time and the influences of modern civilization have had their modifying effect upon man's sporting temperament. From the Coliseum at Rome to the American baseball park, is a vast distance, but human nature in its sporting tendencies, in its love of the animal instincts that pervade the game where man is pitted against his fellow man, vividly portrayed in this twentieth century, and at times is equally as ferocious as in the good old days at Rome. In both, the cry is for the death of some one, of course in this age, the utmost personal insult taking the place of the demand for the life of a fighter.

But the study of character at the baseball game is one of interest. There is no sex in the grand stand when the score is tied. There is no class distinction on the bleachers, when the home club takes the lead. And yet there are many types of the baseball enthusiast, who in the language of the game, is called a "rooter." There is the optimist-who attends ball game, whether the home wins or loses. It is his cheering "get together, boys,"that causes the bleachgether, boys," that causes the bleach ers to cheer the local players, and so often starts the hitting, and brings about a victory. He it is that may be termed the "good rooter," in distinction to the pessimist, who sees nothing good in the home club, and whose money goes on the opposing club. The pessimist is antagonistic to the local club for no special reason. Like the pessimist in every day business life, his nature is to disturb, to upset the peace and comfort of those about him. He is against success in others, and, therefore, likely fails himself. Between these two extremes, are degrees of each, who, as the game varys, will give way to their emotions in expressions more or less intense. The cultivation of a kindly feeling is not hard, for it is the exceptional person that goes to a ball game, to be wholly dissatisfied. And this kindly feeling can take form in being locally patriotic, cheering the home team for its every good play. finding extentuating circumstances for bad plays. It is to be, all the time for the home players, and yet preserve a respect for the visitors, that indicates a good will for an honest when it is honest. The glad cheer to victory, and burst of applause when victory comes, the hero worship of the player who makes the "winning play," these are but exhibitions of "human nature, that will never be eradicated. And no one wishes to see lack of interest in the grand stand. any more than among those who contend on the ball field.

Such Is Ashley Horne of Clayton Candidate for Governor.

Clayton, N. C., June 8, 1907. To the Democrats of North Carolina: Ashley Horne, of this place, is a can didate for Governor, subject to the acion of the democratic State conven-

I have known Mr. Horne all of his life, and feel that it is not out of place or me, of my own knowledge to state what manner of man he is. He is a native of Johnson county: is sixty-five years and surrendered with it at Appocation, but in early manhood voluneered as a private in the Confederate army, and following the fortune of the army of northern Virginia for four years, and surrendered with it at appo mattox. His record as a soldier. Is without blemish.

After the war he had neither the time nor ability to complete his education. Necessity required him to go to work. The first year after going home he cultivated a crop, then clerked in a store, and in 1867 began merchandising for himself. He prospered made friends of his customers, and many of men who began to trade with him forty years ago are still his customers and friends

As a farmer and as a business man he has been successful and he has also embarked in other lines of business. Now he is regarded as one of the most successful men in the state. While he has other large lines, and is engaged in banking insurance manufacturing merchandising, he is still a large and active farmer. He is not merely a farmer on paper, but every day during he crop season a visitor would be apt to find him in the field, actually carryng on large, active and successful farming operations. And so well informed does he keep himself on market prices of farm products, that many will recall that during several recent cars he has published cotton letters which have contained wholesome adice to the farmers with regard to holding their cotton. This advice has proved to be well founded, and there is to estimating the money it saved the farmers of the state, and they were not slow in expressing their gratitude to him. In fact he is on all business propositions a very practical and wise

He came to the state convention in 1898 and threw his whole influence in favor of a straight fight.

If there is one idea in Mr. Horne's mind, or if there is one motive in his life which predominates over all others, it is his opposition and hatred of monopolies and combines. He has always stood for the individual and in favor of the freest competition. He does not believe in any law which gives one man an advantage over another, and he believes that any agree ment between two or more men, or two or more companies to restrict competition, or to create a monopoly is a crime against human right and ought to be punished by the severest manner. Mr. Horne pposed it and offered to become 'reponsible for the future of the mill himself provided it was kept independent. A few years ago when it appear ed that the American Cotton Oil Comnany and the Southern Cotton Oil Co. uld control the cotton seed market of the south, and they possibly might combine and regulate prices. imme diately Mr. Horne assisted in the building of an independent mill Clayton, which mill is now owned and controlled by Clayton people and run independently. One of the rules of his busines life is to give the preference where practicable to do so, to local and independent companies, rather than to foreign companies or large combinations of capital. As far as it is possible to do so, he taboos trusts and monopolies, From the purchase of the oil which Inbricates his machinery to the placing of insurance upon his property he always gives the preference to local dealers and independent companies.
