The entire party took a trip through the Yellowstone Park region, and were delighted with sights of wild grizzlies, hyenas, buffalos, etc. In their native haunts, where the roy ernment is doing so much to prevent the species from becoming extinct and is spending much to propagate them in the great National Park. H says that he finds that while much is being done in the West to preserve game, on account of the positions be ing political or partisan, the chief officer being often selected more be cause of political efficiency than hi natural adaptability or love for the work, the cost is very great. He mentions one State where the game de partment costs the State $50,000 per year, in which not as much work is being done as in North Carolina and South Carolina, where the position are not political, the expense largely by volunteer contributions of mem bers, and the cost in each State not exceeding $10,000.
